NEW EVIDENCE OF DUBOIS' PLOT: ONLY 7 WEEP AT DOUBLE GRAVE

Today

France Is Worried
Dr. Hibbs, Noble Scientist
Can Japan Swallow China?
Have It, Then Advertise

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT accuses Germany of secretly arming for a war of revenge, already well planned, with the recapture of Alsace Lorraine as its object, also recapture of the colonies that France and Great Britain divided between them.

French newspapers express alarm and warn readers with such headings as "Germany is openly preparing for war."

All this bodes ill for the disarmament conference. The intelligent French realize that their hope of keeping what they took, depends on their ability to meet any attack.

Premier Herriot says he is ready to prove to the League of Nations that Germany has been manufacturing arms, secretly.

It is to be hoped that our childish nation will be allowed to keep out of whatever happens.

Russia is said to be much relieved, convinced that the war of "capitalism" against herself, which has been her nightmare, will be long postponed.

In Monte Carlo, if you lost all you had, the gambling house used to supply money to buy your ticket home, to prevent you from committing suicide on the premises and discouraging other gamblers.

Perhaps France and England could plan some deal, or refund, with Germany that would avoid early trouble.

Without that, it will probably come. And while war has changed, and French fliers destroying enemy cities might offset Germany's greater population, it would be a hard war for France, with no Russia, England, or Italy on her side, no millions of American men and billions of American dollars, thrown in at the last moment.

A great loss to science in the death of Dr. Russell A. Hibbs, chief surgeon of New York's Orthopaedic Dispensary and Hospital. Only 63 years old, Dr. Hibbs, saving so many others, destroyed himself with overwork, and over anxiety for his patients. The welfare of any one of the thousands of poor children and adults, upon which he operated gratuitously, weighed upon his mind.

Known and blessed all over the world, Dr. Hibbs' ideas and discoveries are used in every country. His greatest discoveries include his invention for fusion of the spine, used everywhere, saving thousands from life-long suffering, from tuberculosis of the spine, spinal fractures and curvature. He invented new methods of surgery for the hip, knee, ankle and foot. Dr. Hibbs, born in Kentucky, devoted his whole life to surgical science and the relief of human suffering. His ideas were given freely to whoever would use them. He accumulated no fortune for himself, wanted nothing but ever greater usefulness. There are many that honor the medical profession as he did.

If there were more men like him in other lines of effort, men concentrated on public service, not on self, many of our problems would not exist.

Those well informed say China's only immediate hope is in a more or less benevolent domination by Japan. China's war lords, fighting each other, starving the people, offer no hope.

Japan would discourage bandits by killing them, and diminish starvation by abolishing roving bands that devour or destroy crops.

Later, as always happens the Chinese would absorb the Japanese, as England absorbed the Normans, Italy the Germanic invaders, Persia her many invaders, etc.

Poppy growing and the opium habit seem to play a part in China, in spite of efforts to get rid of the drug. One hundred and three magistrates of Honan province resigned when ordered to undergo investigation as to their use of opium. With few, if any exceptions, all were users of the drug. Six thousand acres in one plot are devoted to poppy growing, for opium, in Eastern Honan.

To succeed, first get what people want, then, by advertising, let them know you have it. Competition as keen as any in the country is that between various makers of electric refrigerators. The others will want to know that E. G. Biechler, president of a branch of General Motors, announces a new construction idea to increase storage space in a refrigerator by 25 per cent without increasing outside dimensions.

This sounds like putting a quart into a pint, but not when responsible engineers propose it. What interests newspaper publishers is the fact that, having a good idea, the company will immediately spend half a million dollars to let the people know that they have it.

Probably General Electric will come along with a plan to put two quarts into one pint, with advertising information in-

BOY, 10, ROUTS HOLDUP MEN IN STORE

And when you consider that Francis was just a bit sleepy when he was roused out of a warm bed to get the morning groceries, you'll understand that the bandits who tried to hold up a store in Adams st., Dorchester, today, were lucky to get away alive.

John Graham, North Munster, manager, had no sooner opened the store than two men stepped to the counter and covered him with guns.

"Make it snappy. We ain't fooling," snarled the other.

MANAGER IN CELLAR

At this point Capelle entered.

"You, too, kid. Stick 'em up and be quiet or else—"

"Say," asked Capelle. "Who do you guys think you are? Stick-up men?"

"Yes, you. Shut up." And he reached out to grab Capelle.

"Aw, stop it," said Capelle a bit annoyed.

FIGHTS LIKE WILDCAT.

So astounded were the bandits at the wildcat attack of the boy, that they became panicky. Trying to hold Capelle was like grabbing a handful of razor blades.

Graham, who was crouched in the cellar, took courage at the boy's fight, rushed up stairs and dived at the other bandit. The four rolled around the floor, kicking over barrels and boxes.

"Give me a quart of milk and a loaf of bread," said Capelle to Graham, as he brushed himself off. "A couple of bandits, huh!"

Hoover Administration Neither Republican Nor American, Says Hearst

San Simeon, Cal., Sept. 15, 1932

William Griffin,
Editor and Publisher, New York Enquirer,
New York City.

Mr. Hoover's characteristic modesty prevents him from mentioning the one overwhelming reason for Maine's defection from the Republican party.

There are many specific reasons.

For instance, the subservience of the Republican administration to the power trust.

The approval the Republican administration extended to some of the very questionable proceedings of the international bankers.

The failure of the Republican administration to understand the causes of the depression, or to formulate any effective plans for relieving the depression.

The complete neglect by the Republican administration of the interests of the farmers and the working classes.

FARM STRIKERS LOSE IN CLASH

Worthington, Minn., Sept. 19 (AP)—Brandishing clubs and blocking roads with steel girders, heavy wire cable and spiked machine belts, farmer pickets seeking higher product prices went into action today and soon afterward lost their first brush with the law.

Sheriff Rowe and Deputy Sheriff Levine went to the aid of a farmer and rescued his load of sheep, after the pickets had unhitched his team, tied the horses to a telephone pole and ran the wagon into a ditch.

Led by M. B. Miller, vice-chairman of the Nobles County unit of the State Farmers Holiday Association, which defied the parent body in establishing picket lines, upwards of 300 men patrolled 10 highways leading into Worthington.

The pickets were instructed to turn back all non-perishable farm products in a move intended to help stop shipments into Sioux City markets.

Grace Atwood Not Present at Funeral; Friend Found Who Saw Jeweler Dig Tomb

Other Pictures and Stories on Pages 3 and 5

A single grave in a peaceful cemetery in the Blue Hills received their shattered bodies—an ironic, even a grotesque anti-climax to a trilogy of love and hate and murder.

In the peace of death that follows the turmoil of passion in the lives of men and women, the man who killed himself when his enormous crime was revealed last Friday rejoined the woman he sought to replace after 19 years of married life.

7 MOURN AT GRAVE

DuBois shot himself protesting his love for Grace Atwood who had the youth and beauty Edith DuBois had outlived, but it was Edith DuBois who went with him to the grave and Grace Atwood was not in sight.

It was a kindlier grave than that DuBois constructed of concrete in the cellar of his Plymouth camp to conceal from the world forever, he hoped, his crime and the body of the crime. The cemetery in the hills of South Braintree, quiet with the quiet of death and the early autumn, was the setting for the only peaceful scene in this story of violent death.

There were seven mourners only at the brief funeral services in Quincy and in the cortege to the grave, but a crowd of about one hundred curious persons gathered outside Hall's undertaking establishment in Cottage ave., Quincy, during the services.

MOTHER NEAR COLLAPSE

The most pathetic figure in the tragedy was Mrs. Cecile DuBois, aged, gray-haired mother of the slayer, who warned the world to "judge not, lest ye be also judged," and was on the verge of collapse during the funeral.

With her were her surviving son, Jules, his wife, their three children, Jules, Jr., 18; George, 15, and Rosalie, 17, and another boy of about five years of age.

They alone were admitted into the funeral establishment where DuBois lay beside the woman he slew. Outside, while Rev. H. K. Bartow of Christ Epescopal Church conducted services lasting only 13 minutes, four police stood guard. The curious stood in a solemn awe and motorists slowed down, blocking traffic.

WIFE'S KIN ABSENT

There were no flowers. Somehow, flowers would have appeared wholly out of place.

In the funeral place, the aged Mrs. DuBois looked upon her son's face for the first time since his death and for the last time. None except members of the family viewed the body.

If they live, relatives of Mrs. DuBois stayed away. Except for

FRANCE ACCEPTS HOOVER DISARMAMENT PROPOSAL

U. S. TO OPPOSE GERMAN PLEA FOR EQUALITY

Senator Reed Tells Herriot America Sides With Britain in Controversy

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 19 (INS)—Premier Herriot, at an intimate luncheon in the Quai D'Orsay today, informed Ambassador Walter E. Edge, United States Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania and Theodore Marriner, counsellor of the American embassy, that he is ready to accept President Hoover's proposal for a one-third cut in armaments as the principal basis for discussion at the Geneva disarmament conference.

The fact that Herriot had announced this decision at secret meetings of parliamentary commissions on foreign relations was exclusively revealed by International News Service Saturday.

U. S. SIDES WITH BRITAIN

Afterward it was stated in authorized American quarters that Premier Herriot had made a distinct advance toward the American viewpoint on disarmament.

Senator Reed, it was learned, explained lengthily to Herriot American insistence upon an appreciable arms cut at Geneva.

Reed told the French Premier that America's views on the German aide memoire, demanding arms equality, were much the same as the British, as disclosed in the British memorandum made public today.

The United States, he said, insisted that treaty agreements be respected, and could not condone violation by Germany of the military clauses of the Versailles pact, while at the same time advising Japan that she would not respect unilateral treaty changes in the Far East.

AGAINST ARMS INCREASE

Though he spoke in general terms Herriot replied that he was now willing to repay constructive support at Geneva against Germany's recent moves with an active French policy leading to a serious arms cut. He did not, however, go into details, saying he could not tie himself to a definite program until he saw the turn of events at Geneva.

The question to be settled, as far as the Americans are concerned, is how far Herriot actually will go toward immediate carrying out of the Hoover one-third cut proposal.

It is expected this question will be disposed of under three branches:

NAVY CUT DOUBTED

First—A one-third cut in world navies is believed to be out of the question at the moment because the United States probably would not agree.

Second—There can be no practical discussions of a one-third cut in air forces while Germany absents herself from the disarmament debates because her demands for arms equality has not been met.

Third—Herriot accepts the Hoover program for a one-third cut in land forces, but wants Germany to count Adolf Hitler's brown-shirted militia and Mussolini to count the Fascist militia as partial armies.

They abhor the very word.

But in jolly old December

More Noise From G. O. P.

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Now that Maine indicated it likes its political waffles turned over once every 18 years, the Republicans are hanging up new Olympic records for galloping in circles.

They're bending every effort to twist the situation into another shape.

Mr. Hoover has instructed his stentorian orators to talk louder and longer. They don't have to say anything definite but they must bellow.

Just to make everything comfy and cozy, Secretary Hurley circularized the Legion convention with letters bearing the government frank. It is the most economical way of losing friends known to science.

And to put an old gray bonnet on the climax, Mr. Hoover has turned goose bone prophet and is predicting a fierce and horrible winter if we don't do as grandma says and eat our Republican spinach.

HOOVER LEADING FINAL FIGHT TO AVERT DEFEAT

President Will Invade West, Coolidge to Speak; Roosevelt Farm Talk Alarms G. O. P.

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Sept. 19 — A flood of oratory will be directed into every nook and corner of the United States in the next seven weeks in an effort to convince the electorate that President Hoover must be retained.

The President will lead the invasion of the states. He will possibly go to the Pacific Coast, and Calvin Coolidge will deliver one address.

All arguments advanced by Governor Roosevelt will be answered and Hoover himself will attend to the most outstanding.

The "Four Horsemen" of the cabinet—Mills, Hurley, Stimson and Hyde—will go into high gear until election day.

LEADERS CALLED.

This, and more, was decided last night at a White House conference at which the President assembled National Chairman Everett Sanders, Secretary Mills, Secretary Hurley, Judson C. Welliver, who was identified with the publicity of the Coolidge administration, and Wright Patterson, Chicago, editor of the Western Newspaper Union.

The President has begun drafting a reply to Roosevelt's farm speech at Topeka. The Republicans are not underestimating the force of this address. Mr. Hoover told a caller he considered it "very adroit."

Another presidential speech will deal with the problem of excessive expenditures for veterans' relief.

Just where Coolidge will be thrown into action is problematical. It is reported the former executive prefers to make a radio address from his Northampton home.

Are Shot Down After Hot Gun Fight Waged From Protection of a Thicket

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 19 (AP)—The slaying of a woman by highwaymen two weeks ago has caused five more deaths—two officers and three outlaws—in the sparsely settled hill country of eastern Oklahoma.

Webster Reece, a deputy sheriff, and Bud McClain, who officers said drove the car in which were men suspected of slaying Mrs. Susie Sharp, were killed at dawn Saturday. Sunday's encounter brought death to Andrew McGinnis, a special deputy sheriff, and to Ky Carlisle and Troy Love, escaped convicts.

Carlisle and Love were surrounded on three sides of a thicket by possemen. A demand to surrender brought a shot from the outlaws. McGinnis dropped, a bullet through the heart.

The state troops were stationed on the court house square where 24 hours ago Commonwealth's Atty. Frank H. Baker and John Brockman were killed and Frank Young, 40, was wounded.

The victims of a feud that is traced back to Civil War days by some old residents, lay for nearly four hours until Gov. Laffoon sent troops an the feudists fled.

Hoover Administration Neither Republican Nor American, Says Hearst

European nations had incurred to the back of the American taxpayer.

The ingenuity of the Republican administration in devising moratoriums for the relief of Europe when America needed the best thought and effort of its own government.

The autocratic attitude of the Republican administration towards the people's Congress, arrogating to itself the functions which properly belong to Congress.

The contempt for popular opinion and popular judgment which the Republican President had expressed in written articles, and frequently evidenced in his official acts.

The inexplicable hostility of the Republican administration to the veterans of the World War, culminating in the shameful attack upon the innocent and unarmed veterans of the bonus army, and upon their wives and children, by soldiers employing bayonets, gas-bombs and tanks; as the result of which two veterans lie in Arlington Cemetery and several children in untimely graves.

All of these reasons, however, for the Democratic majorities in Maine could be summed up in the one word, Hoover.

Doubtless many Republicans also remembered that Hoover is primarily an internationalist and secondly a Wilson Democrat, that he had spent most of his life abroad, and that most of his interests—financial, political, social and sentimental—were foreign interests.

There must have been many Republicans who did not care to vote in endorsement of an administration which was neither Republican nor American.

Washington, Sept. 19—Business is definitely recovering, Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, announced to a radio audience.

There is reason to follow that they are accomplishing considerable good, but we must not be too exuberant over the prospects," Klein added. "Convalescence of the fever-ridden business body of the nation after such terrific illness is a crucial, painfully deliberate process."

SPURNS OFFER OF PRIVACY IN PROTEST

Indian Leader Hopes to Extend Life as Long as Possible

Bombay, Sept. 19 (US)—The possibility that Mahatma Gandhi will refuse the British Government's offer to remove him from jail to a private residence when he begins tomorrow his threatened fast "until death," was hinted at in a letter he sent the Bombay Government today. Gandhi wrote:

"I do not relish the restrictions proposed to be imposed on me. I am waiting the government's final decision."

The Nationalist leader threatens to starve himself in protest against Britain's settlement of the Communal problem. The British India office suggested that he begin his fast in a private residence to which he would be removed on promise not to seek escape or to agitate against British rule.

Mahatma Gandhi made further reductions in his diet and began abstaining from all physical exercise yesterday in preparation for his fast.

It was learned at Yeroda jail in Poona, where he is held, that he has been studying ways to extend his life as long as possible after beginning the hunger strike.

MacSwiney and Sacco Famous Hunger Strikers

England has watched men starve themselves to death for a principle before. It saw Terence MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork, refuse food for 74 days until he died. MacSwiney, a Sinn Feiner, struck at what he called an unjust sentence for possession of seditious documents.

SUFFRAGETTE STRIKERS

Two other Sinn Feiners died the same way. Joseph Fitzgerald, accused of murdering a soldier, collapsed after 68 days, and Joseph Murphy lived 76 days without food. This was during the Irish uprisings in 1918 and thereafter, from which finally emerged the present Irish Free State.

Years before England had seen Emmeline Pankhurst, militant suffragette, and her companions not only refuse food but successfully resist attempts at forced feeding. Shortly England granted full equal rights to women.

SACCO A STRIKER

America, too, has had its hunger strikes. Mrs Pankhurst, with two famous American women suffragettes Alice Paul and Lucy Burns, and other more zealous disciples led a similar strike in the United States shortly before congress passed the suffrage amendment.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, whose trial for murder became an international "cause celebre," went on hunger strikes at various times during their imprisonment.

Men have gone on hunger strikes for many reasons in the United States. A William Roche in 1920 made his wife fast 51 days in an attempt to cure her rheumatism.

TECH MAN MUST DIE FOR SLAYING

The death sentence imposed on Miguel Ahumada, graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for stabbing his sweetheart to death two years ago, was upheld today by the courts in Mexico City.

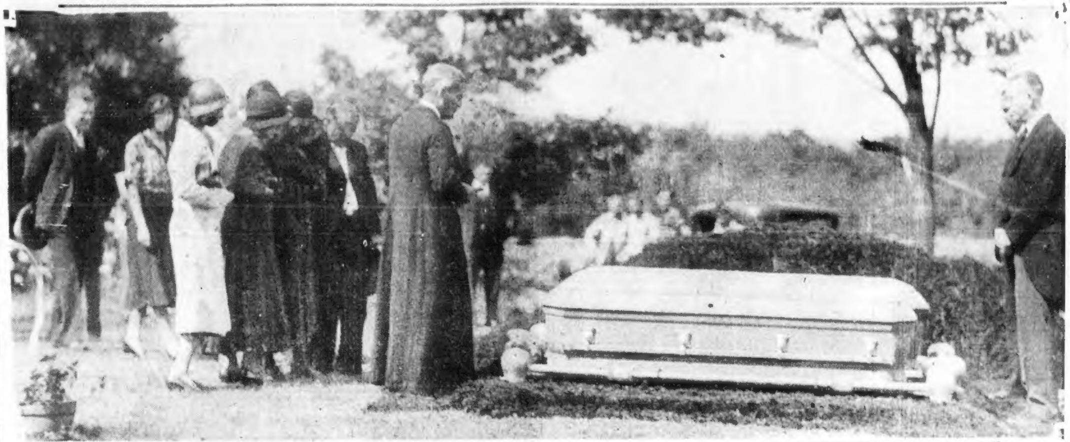
Ahumada, son of the former governor of the State of Jalisco, killed Senorita Tona Casillias, member of a socially prominent family in Guadalajara, Mexico, while he was drug-crazed, according to his own confession.

He was graduated from M. I. T. in 1907.

BRITISH STAND JARS GERMANY

Berlin, Sept. 19 (INS)—Stunned at the sharp rejection of the German demand for arms equality by Great Britain, the Von Papen ministry decided to abandon note writing on the subject and will reply neither to France nor Great Britain.

The German claim, however, will be pushed in diplomatic conversations. Germany probably will elucidate her views on disarmament at the meeting of the league council September 25.



The mask of death wears a sardonic smirk of bitter irony for Charles E. DuBois. In a single grave in Blue Hills Cemetery, in South Braintree, he was buried today, side by side with the wife he killed for love of another woman. Edith DuBois' presence by his side in life was a continual torment of his passion. Now, dug from an awful grave, she lies beside him forever. So death, which Masefield called "the passing strange," makes mockery of the plans of men. "Oh, God, accept our prayer in behalf of these souls," intones Rev. H. K. Bartow. DuBois' family, behind the minister, are bowed in grief. His mother rocks on her heels, moaning. There is none to mourn the woman. In this lonely cemetery is the quiet of death. (Staff photo.)

KILLER PATTED CEMENT OVER HER BODY

Dubois Employe Shudders as He Bares for First Time Story of Tomb

Harry Frazier, Braintree chauffeur for Charles DuBois, who helped DuBois build the cement crypt which enclosed the body of his murdered wife, his voice choking with anger, told today in an interview with the Boston Evening American how he was the innocent accomplice in the burial.

"If I had only known what he was planning, when he asked me to mix the cement for that thing he built, in the cellar to bury "Dede," h ewould never have gotten away with it," Frazier said.

"I would have hit him with a shovel an ran to the nearest phone to notify the police.

"There was never a better and she was one of my best woman lived than Mrs. DuBois friends.

TELLS OF DUBOIS PLAN

"When the police interviewed me, they asked me if I had any suspicion of what I was doing. How could I rhave had. This is the first time I have talked to any newspaPer and now that they are both buried, I am going to tell all I know about it.

"As early as July 3, Charlle DuBois told me that he was going to lay a cement floor in the cellar of his cottage. He said he had been planning it for a long time. He had some cement already on hand. He got some more the next day, and went to work.

PRAISED OWN TOMB

"We worked a couple of hours the first day. There was one part of the cellar under the water supply tank which had already been cemented.. We started from that and did a section of the flooring. When DaBois first mentioned this, he asked me what I thought of cementing the floor. I told him I thought it would be a good thing as we were always walking around in the sand and that the cement would keep it dry.

"While we were working on it the first day 'Dede' came down from the kitchen and said in a cheerful way: 'Oh, that's going to look fine. It's going to be a big improvement.'

"I thought, when I heard thaa

CABINET QUITS IN SWEDEN

Stockholm, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Swedish government of Premier F. T. Hamrin resigned today following yesterdayy's election for a new lower House of the Riksdag.

The issue was a majority rule by the Social Democrats, who fell short of a majority, but gained 14 seats. The Agrarians gained nine.

Defeat of the Conservatives was interpreted as indicating Sweden is opposed to high tariffs, although the farmers demand protection.

BELIEVES BERN WED DOROTHY

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 19 (INS)—The body of Dorothy Millette, "phantom bride" of Paul Bern, rested under an evergreen tree in a Sacramento cemetery today, but her affairs still figured in public records.

Determined to lift the veil of her mysterious past, Chester Gannon, attorney for the Sacramento public administrator, sought clues of a marriage to Bern, suicide husband of Jean Harlow, platinum blonde of the screen.

"I am convinced that somewhere, perhaps in some obscure court house, there are records of the marriage of Dorothy Millette and Paul Bern," Gannon said. "There was a stronger tie than a temporary bond between her and Bern."

He was taken to City Hospital, a short distance away, and was found to be suffering from a possible fracture of the left arm and nose, a compound fracture of the right wrist and lacerations of the forehead.

McKee to Close Risque Shows in New York

Apparently not waiting for License Commissioner Geraghty's recommendations following an investigation, he ordered the shut-down of two houses in 42nd st. At the same time he warned other producers that while "I'm not a censor, there'll be no open filth while I'm in office."

New Process Puts Vitamin A at Lower Cost

Cleveland, Sept. 19 (AP)—For the first time in history, a supply of the primary concentrate of vitamin A was assured to the world today at prices low enough for ordinary medical practice.

Heretofore, the vitamin was produced only in such minute quantities and at such great expense that only a few months ago it commanded a price equivalent to more than $11,000 a pound.

Revelation of a greater supply and a more "reasonable" price was made by the discoverers of a new process of extraction, Dr. A. F. O. Germann and his assistant, Dr. Harold M. Barnett, both connected with a Cleveland bio-chemistry laboratory.

WOBURN GIRL IS BRIDE IN N. Y.

Miss Hidur Elizabeth Strom, 30, of 81 Green st., Woburn, has been married in New York to Philip Louis Livingston, 47, a New York business man and a direct descendant of Philip Livingston, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, it was announced in Woburn today.

The couple were married on September 12 by the Rev. George Wells Arms of New York and will make their home in Brooklyn.

Livingston was divorced from Nellie Bentley Livingston in 1927 at Miami, Fla. He is a native of Sylvania, Ga., the son of Walter Chapman Livingston, a Philadelphia attorney, and Elizabeth Steuer Livingston.

The bride is the daughter of Manner and Hilda Jansson Strom and has been prominent in Congregational Church circles in Woburn.

EARLY CULTURE IN ERIN FOUND

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Prof. William Lloyd Warner, of Harvard, returned today on the liner Stuttgart enthusiastic about the facilities offered his expedition in its archaeological survey in Ireland.

He has just completed a three months survey for the Department of Anthropology of Harvard University and the Peabody Museum and his expedition has its objective a five-year study, its purpose being to combine archaeological technique with present day social customs in Ireland, to go back into the prehistoric past and connect it through historic times with present day social conditions.

Ireland was selected because Prof. Warner and his colleagues believe it the last outpost of early civilizations. In its excavations in counties Westmeath and Clare, he said, much evidence was found of early Irish culture which antedated the culture of other European civilizations.

He had only one regret, the rapidity with which Ireland is adopting new customs and fashions.

25-FT. PLUNGE PROVES FATAL

Michael J. Hughes, 62, of 49 Millwood st., Dorchester, an engineer employed by the City of Boston, plunged 25 feet to his death today from the top of a boiler at the Mile rd. pumping station, Dorchester.

He was found lying on the concrete floor beside the boiler atop which he had been working. No one saw him fall and it is not known whether he became ill or lost his balance.

Daniel Leary and Thomas McDonald, two other employes, who found the engineer, telephoned police. On the way to the pumping station, the police ambulance picked up Rev. John Morrissey of St. Ambrose's Church, Dorchester, who administered the last rites of the church.

When Hughes was taken to City Hospital in the ambulance he was pronounced dead.

Mackerel Dogs? Of Course! Here's What They Are

Joseph Rizzo, of Prospect st., West End, and his now famous "mackerel" dog have met the law again—and lost.

Joe was arraigned in Municipal Court today because Leo is a "vicious and biting dog," and the entire populace of Prospect st. was in court to so testify.

Judge Michael J. Murray, who stepped from the bench several weeks ago, when Joe was in court on the same charge, to see what a "mackerel" dog looked like, found Rizzo guilty and fined him $20.

Rizzo pleaded that the Prospect st. residents are "jealous of Leo." A petition, signed by 25 neighbors, prompted today's court action.

P. S.—A "mackerel" dog is a "mongrel," when you can't pronounce "mongrel." Rizzo can't.

RIVER GIVES UP TWO BODIES

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—The East River yielded two bodies and gave the police two mysteries to solve today. Police launch No. 1 was patroling the river when the lookout spied the body of a boy. The body was pulled out of the water and the launch turned toward shore with its grim burden.

Nosing into the dock the boat came upon another body. Pulled aboard, it was revealed to be the body of a man, a sack covering the head and the feet bound with wire.

The body of the boy bore no marks of violence.

the man who is closer to her in death than at any time during their recent troubled years of domesticity, Mrs. DuBois was quite alone. Almost as alone as when she was buried beneath the cement of a cellar floor.

AGED MOTHER CRUSHED

There were two hearses and one mourner's car in the cortege. The body of Mrs. DuBois was carried in the first. DuBois followed her to the grave.

DuBois' mother, overwhelmed by sorrow, weeping continuously, was literally borne up by her son and a grandson.

Not DuBois, not his wife, not Grace Atwood but this aged woman who lived to know her son as a murderer and yet refused to admit the fact even to herself, was the most pathetic figure, the most deserving of sympathy.

"My son . . . Oh, my son!" she murmured throughout the rites.

CHAUFFEUR COLLAPSES

At the grave, in a new section of the cemetery, the Episcopal committal service was omitted. Newman's prayer was read by Mr. Bartow.

"Oh, God, accept our prayer in behalf of these souls . . ."

The old mother rocked on her heels, supported by her loved ones. Outside the cemetery gates Chief John J. Heeney kept a small crowd of the curious moving.

In the little group at the grave were Larry Frazier, the DuBois chauffeur, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Heinlein, of Braintree, whose suspicions of DuBois' story regarding his wife's death set police on his trail. Mrs. Jules DuBois and Mrs. Heinlein embraced tearfully. Frazier actually collapsed.

"My boy is dead. What is there to say? His wife is dead. Poor Charles! Poor Edith! I am a mother and only I can know how a terrible state of affairs like this can bring torture."

When asked what she though of DuBois' suicide note she answered:

"IF I'D KNOWN"

"Why, what do you think? What would any mother think. I believe Charles. I always did believe in him. He was always good to me and so was Edith. They had little squabbles like all other couples do, but they were good to me. If I had known anything like this would happen I would have accepted Charles' offer and come here to live."

She was asked if she noticed any change in her son's attitude after he had met Miss Atwood.

"Please, please, don't talk about that girl," she said. "I did not know her. If I had known her my advice to Charles would have been for him to drop her and he would have heeded it. But I did not know and therefore I could not advise.

"I hope the public will be liberal with my son's memory. He was a good boy to me. All I ask of the public is, 'judge not, lest ye be judged'."

She said that as far as she now knew, all the property left her by DuBois' will, written during the time he was under suspicion of murder will be disposed of.

"Of course," she added, "some things I will keep in memory of my son. That cottage—I must not even see it again."

GIRL FACES GRILL

The funeral does not close the case, for apparently Grace Atwood, near collapse at her Middleboro home, will be questioned again. Police asked Asst. Dist. Atty. John V. Sullivan to permit them to interrogate her once more before the case is closed in order that, if possible, they can further substantiate their charge of murder and refute Du- s' last claim that his wife killed elf.

the same time there was new ence refuting his claim of his e's suicide and a new theory s advanced to the effect that e was alive, unconscious from a eeping powder, when he carried her to the crypt he had constructed in the camp cellar, and shot her in her grave.

The new evidence is from Lester Case, Flushing, N. Y., jeweler, who spent a week from July 30 to Aug. 6 at the DuBois camp on Great Herring Pond and watched DuBois sweat over construction of the cement vault where, a few days later, he sealed up his wife's remains.

DuBois asked Case to help him make the vault and told him it was a place where he planned to [illegible] his beer!

"MADMAN" SAYS CASE

"I slept six days with a madman who was coolly and deliberately planning the murder of his wife," was the statement made by Case.

Case said most of the time he was at Plymouth Du Bois sweated and toiled in the digging of his wife's grave and the building of the concrete cover, which he hoped would hide for all time his cold-blooded murder of the French woman who had been his devoted mate for 19 years.

"One day Du Bois seemed particularly tired from his work and he asked me to give him a hand in mixing the concrete," Case narrates. "I laughed at him and told him that I was up there for a vacation and not to mix concrete."

Case declares that he never met Miss Atwood who supplanted Mrs. DuBois in the affections of her husband.

On Aug. 21 Case received at his home in Flushing a letter from DuBois "breaking" the news of the death of Mrs. DuBois from injuries received in an automobile accident, but not stating where the accident had occurred.

At DuBois Funeral

The letter on stationery of the Hotel Statler, Boston, and mailed Aug. 20 at Buzzards Bay, Mass., follows:

"Dear Lester—I have received your two letters, but was unable to write as I am heartbroken. My poor wife, Dede, died last Sunday from injuries received in an auto accident Saturday. I am simply going crazy around here alone, so guess I will pack up pretty soon for N. Y.

"As you know, she is happy now and will not suffer any more from that dreadful disease known as cancer. It is a terrible shock.

"CHARLES."

"Right after I received the letter from DuBois announcing his wife's death, I wrote a letter to him expressing my sympathy," says Case. "I never got a reply from DuBois to this letter."

THEY SEEMED HAPPY

"When I visited them there was nothing to indicate that DuBois had lost his affection for his wife. In all the time I knew them they impressed me as being much in love with each other. It was not a demonstrative affection in which they were kissing each other all the time, but it was an affection of two persons who had gone through 20 years of married life without serious difficulty and were willing to live their lives peacefully and contentedly together.

"Mrs. DuBois was an excellent housekeeper. She did all the cooking and made fancy dishes and cakes for me and DuBois while I was a guest there. She did not join in the swimming and fishing.

"DuBois told me that his wife suffered from cancer, but that she did not know it. She would take a drink with us every once in a while, more to be a good sport, I think, than because she wanted the drink.

"When I remarked his industry in digging the cellar up he told me he was going to build a vault in which he could cool bottled beer and other drinks and preserves and vegetables. It was then he asked me to help mix the concrete and I told him jokingly that I was his guest for a vacation and not to mix concrete. He just laughed.

"In view of the murder of Mrs. DuBois and his suicide, I firmly believe now that those six days I spent at Great Herring Pond were spent with a madman, who was coolly and deliberately planning the murder of his wife."

SLAIN IN GRAVE?

The theory of the murder being committed in the grave was given serious consideration as Chief Russell Dearborn of Plymouth conferred at Dedham with Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan. It is based principally upon the failure to find any bloodstains in the cottage except a few on a mattress which might not have figured in the crime.

If DuBois killed his wife in the second floor bedroom he had to carry her body down two flights of stairs, those of the cellar being almost perpendicular, and police doubt that he could have done so without leaving some evidence of the crime along the way.

The position of the body, when it was taken from the crypt, was consistent with the actual murder having been committed after the woman had been placed in the grave.

There is almost indisputable evidence to back up the police contention that DuBois murdered. There is the construction of the crypt itself and there is his very attitude during the long process of cementing the cellar floor, an attitude of engrossed and worried detachment which his wife remarked upon in a letter to a friend. This points to long premeditation.

Then, police have established that the gun with which he killed his wife and later himself was bought within a few weeks of the crime and that the bullets were purchased by him within 24 hours of the shooting of Mrs. DuBois.

On the other hand, in plotting murder he was a careless, almost a carefree, plotter. Careless and callous—but not clever.

STORY WEAK ALIBI

One would have thought that building the crypt, with murder in his brain, he would have kept its existence a secret from others. Yet he even had Larry Frazier, his chauffeur-handy man, help him, and he asked aid in its building from his friend Case, who watched him sweat at his work—sweat resulting more from his hidden thoughts, perhaps, than from his toil.

His story of the Montreal auto accident, in which he told friends his wife was killed, is one of the queerest features of the case.

It would have been consistent with a cold-blooded planning of a crime for DuBois to have had ready a strong alibi for his wife's disappearance. Yet the alibi he advanced could have been no weaker. He depended on an auto crash which had never existed in record and he even added to its list of mythical victims the names of two friends who moved in the same circle and same locale as he did.

Why he did not merely say his wife had disappeared is one puzzle, explainable, apparently, only by the police theory that he wanted it to be known she was dead so he could wed Miss Atwood. Why, if he wanted it to be known that she was dead, he did not say that she alone had been killed while motoring in Canda, is another question for which police have no answer.

DEATH ADDED PROOF

There was little consciousness of guilt about his attitude between the date of his wife's death and the day he first came under official suspicion, for he danced and had gay parties literally upon his wife's grave.

Yet his own suicide was the strongest evidence of a guilty conscience, police pointed out, because if he had been innocent, even if he believed himself hopelessly snared by circumstances, although innocent, he would have lived to fight for establishment of his story.

Innocent men seldom kill themselves because they are accused. And if chivalry toward Miss Atwood was foremost in his mind he would have lived to clear her name, police said.

When Miss Atwood was first questioned state detectives announced they would quiz her again when the body of Mrs. DuBois was found.

One police official, in particular, expressed the opinion today that the case, closed, was incomplete. He was skeptical of the suicide of Mrs. DuBois as claimed in her husband's note to his attorney, Jeremiah McAnarney.

"I shall call on Asst. Dist.-Atty. Sullivan today and request that he again question Miss Atwood as to what knowledge she might have regarding the relations between DuBois and his wife prior to the latter's disappearance and the subsequent suicide of DuBois shortly before her body was found in the cellar of their cottage," the official said.

FUNERAL TODAY

"There are also many unexplained angles to the tragedy that Miss Atwood might be able to shed some light upon. I do not for a moment believe that she had any knowledge of the murder of Mrs. DuBois until the body was found, but I believe she can tell more about the relations between the DuBois couple than she has been permitted to do up to this time.

"She has been questioned only once and then for only seven minutes, and in presence of her father and counsel and the district attorney. This case should not be closed until all doubt thrown around it by the suicide theory has been dispelled."

GRACE IN SECLUSION

Miss Atwood, reported last night by her sister, Marion, to be on the verge of a breakdown, remained in seclusion with her Middleboro home awaiting the decision of the authorities as to whether she would be subjected to further examination at this time.

She has been officially questioned but once since police began the hunt for Mrs. DuBois a week ago, yet on that one occasion, according to Prosecutor Sullivan, she gave, unwittingly, enough evidence "to hang" the man with whom she was in love.

Clark said: "There will be no statement from Miss Grace or from the Atwood family."

DOUBTS DUBOIS NOTE

The fair-haired, 24-year-old college graduate, who had hoped to become Mrs. DuBois No. 2, is the only survivor of the triangle that caused murder and suicide. Her story of her relations with DuBois has never been related, even to the police, and with the termination of the more gruesome phase of the case, the spotlight of inquiry now centers solely upon her.

Charles D. Swenning, a fellow townsman and the man who introduced her to Mr. and Mrs. DuBois, unwittingly laying the groundwork for a love affair and murder, made the surprising assertion today that he doubted if DuBois wrote the note, claiming the suicide of his wife, that Jeremiah J. McAnarney, DuBois' lawyer, found secreted in a drawer of a desk in his office.

CALLS NOTE "FAKE"

He thought it might have been written by someone else and left there for McAnarney to find.

"To my mind, that suicide note is a fake," he said. "I would like to see the original or a photograph of it and I believe I could tell from the writing. I wonder . . ."

He was asked by Jules DuBois to attend the funeral, but decided not to intrude on the family sorrow.

Swenning said there was no doubt in his mind but what DuBois slew his wife. He said he believed DuBois was insane.

He branded as an absurd exaggeration, however, that he had fled for his life from the DuBois camp a few days before the tragedy in the cottage.

What actually transpired on that occasion he related in this wise.

"I saw no pistol, neither did I flee for my life. When I arrived at the camp, Mrs. DuBois was sitting in the hammock. She said Charlie had gone to Hyannis and would be back soon and when he did come in he had a bundle. But I had no way of knowing what was in it.

LIKE INSANE MAN

"All three of us went into the camp and chatted awhile about nothing of particular import when I suddenly noticed a terrible look come over Charlie's face. He was looking at me. His features seemed distorted and he had the steely glint of an insane man in his eyes.

"In addition to that he seemed different during my whole visit. He was not so cordial and neither he nor Mrs. DuBois saw me to door when I left. I left quietly and any story of my fleeing for my life is absurd.

"Keep in mind that I wondered a little at the change in Charlie, but I surmised there probably had been a family spat. Since then, of course, I learned that he was jealous of me. Such a jealousy was absolutely unfounded and had I known of it we could have talked it over and settled it.

"Considering such a jealousy, I have no doubt now but that he might have been thinking on that day, 'Here's my chance to finish this fellow.'

"The only weapon I ever saw in the camp was an old bird gun. I never saw him with a pistol before, during or after that day. The man was just simply crazy."

Roosevelt Will Be Feted in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (INS)—Gov. Roosevelt will be a guest of honor at a motion picture sport pageant Saturday in the Olympic stadium for the benefit of charity, it was announced today.

U. S. MARRIAGES SHOW SHARP DECREASE

Washington, Sept. 19 (INS)—Present conditions have caused a number of important changes in the location and marital trends of the American people, while recent figures showed a pronounced decrease in illiteracy as compared with ten days ago, the Commerce Department revealed today.

Marriage for 1931 showed a pronounced decrease while there was a strong back-to-the farm movement. The birth rate has been decidedly down.

Farm population increased approximately 648,000 in 1931 to a total of 31,260,000.

This was exclusive of the movement of city dwellers to small tracts near cities which were not considered as regular farms. Of the total increase in farm population 207,000 were accounted for by exodus from cities. The remainder was ascribed to the excess of births over deaths. While the national birth rate is lower this is true only of the urban areas.

Reports received by the census bureau showed there were 1,060,036 marriages in the United States in 1931, a decrease of 6.1 per cent from 1930. In 1930 there was a decline of 8.4 per cent from 1929. Officials attributed this decline as almost entirely due to the depression and unemployment.

MAINE CONVICT ESCAPES AGAIN

Ellsworth, Me., Sept. 19 (AP)—Loren E. Roberts, negro convict who faces eight charges of larceny, was at large again today following his escape from a hospital here.

Roberts was being treated for bullet wounds he received several weeks ago while resisting capture by Sheriff James A. Cummings of Washington county, at the time he was a fugitive from Hancock county jail, where he was serving a sentence for larceny.

Sheriff Cummings shot the huge negro in the stomach. Although it was believed Roberts would die, he recovered and had been shackled to his bed awaiting araignment.

DuBois Case Similar in Many Ways to Bluebeard Killings

The DuBois murder mystery, to go into Massachusetts crime records as one of the weirdest of murder and suicide cases, is similar in ways to several old murder cases—especially that for which Henry "Bluebeard" Powers, alleged killer of dozens of women, was hanged recently in West Virginia.

Edith DuBois' body was found buried in a concrete crypt underneath the cellar of the DuBois summer camp at Great Herring Pond, Plymouth. The suicide of her husband, Charles DuBois, a few days ago, was considered by police a confession of guilt.

ROMANCE BY MAIL

A significant point is that the couple first met through a matrimonial agency.

Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, a Park Ridge, Ill., widow and her three children were found strangled and buried underneath the concrete floor of the garage in Powers' Quiet Dell home near West Clarksburg, W. Va. Another victim, Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, of Northboro, Mass., was found strangled in the same grave.

And, strangely enough, Powers first met Mrs. Eicher through advertising in matrimonial papers. He operated a personal "mail-order" matrimonial agency, sending letters to scores of women around the country. His prime object was money and the murders followed as an adjunct.

GUNNESS CASE

In 1917 Ruth Crager, 18-year-old New York girl, was attacked, killed and buried in the cellar of a New York bicycle shop. Her confessed murderer, Alfredo Cocchi, owner of the shop, fled to Italy but was later caught and given 30 years in prison. This was the equivalent of a life sentence for the man, for few Italians live more than seven years in solitary confinement.

Another crime that parallels the DuBois case is that of Mrs. Belle Gunness. In 1910 Mrs. Gunness was accused of conducting a "matrimonial farm" near LaPorte, Ind.

Her victims, all young men who had answered her offers of marriage, were found buried about the farm.

As authorities were about to arrest her, her farm house suddenly went up in flames. The bodies of her two children and that of a woman were found in the ruins. The authorities were never sure that the woman's body was that of Mrs. Gunness.

In this case again the matrimonial agency enters into the grim horror and the victims' bodies are interred.

DOCTOR HANGED

The last similar case is that of Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, a quiet physician who left this country in 1900 for England with his second wife, Cora Hanner, whom he married in 1893, and who was a beautiful girl with operatic ambitions.

In January, 1910, Mrs. Crippen disappeared from her home at 39 Hilldrop Crescent, Camden Hill, England, and in July of the same year authorities made a starting discovery under the cellar floor of the home.

They had found the headless, limbless, boneless, body of Mrs. Crippen. Dr. Crippen was arrested as he landed at Quebec, Canada, with his sweetheart, Ethel LeNeve, who had worked for him since 1902. He was hanged.

BITTER FIGHTS AS PRIMARY NEARS

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

A whirlwind of oratory on the stump and over the radio tonight brings to a dramatic close one of the most extraordinary primary campaigns in the history of the state.

What appears like general apathy in state-wide candidacies is more than offset by an unusually large number of intensely bitter local contests.

And the voters at the polls tomorrow will have to scratch their heads over the biggest list of candidates, especially on the Democratic ballots, that they have ever been confronted with.

INTEREST IN YOUNGMAN

Chief interest of course, is centered in the fight for the Republican nomination for Governor, in which Lt. Governor William H. Youngman is battling for the right to oppose Governor Ely in the November election against former Registrar Frank A. Goodwin, former Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan and Atty. Walter E. Brownell. The last three are from Boston.

While the size of the vote that Sullivan will receive is being watched, particularly by the Democrats, Goodwin is conceded to be the real challenger. It is not expected, however, that he will overcome the Youngman machine which has been in process of building for the last ten years.

Brownell, because he is unknown politically, is not being given even an outsider's chance.

ELY UNOPPOSED

As far as Governor Ely is concerned he is as good as nominated for he has no opposition in the Democratic primary. This is also true of State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, and Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook and Atty. Joseph E. Warner, Republicans.

The second contest in importance from a state-wide viewpoint is also in the Republican primary, namely, for the nomination for lieutenant governor. In this contest President Gaspar G. Bacon, of the senate, and Governor's Councilor Chester I. Campbell are fighting it out. Of the two, Bacon is the more widely known to the Republican voters.

For the Republican nomination for state treasurer, State Senator Max Ulin, of Dorchester, is lined up against Francis Prescott, of Grafton. Prescott was chairman of the Republican State Committee before the present chairman, Amos L. Taylor. He also is a son-in-law of Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant and intimate friend of Calvin Coolidge.

COOK FAVORITE

Alonzo B. Cook is practically certain, on his past voting strength, to be renominated by the Republicans for state auditor. He is opposed by Emerson J. Coldwell, of Weymouth. The Republican machine is said to be backing Coldwell.

Of the eight Democrats in the contest for the nomination for lieutenant-governor, former Lieut.-Gov. Edward P. Barry appears as the most likely winner. He is better known than any of his opponents with the possible exception of John E. Swift of Milford and Mayor Michael O'Neill of Everett, acknowledged as his principal challengers. Neither City Councillor Francis Kelly, former Councillor David Brickley, ex-Senator William I. Hennessey nor Raymond Fitzgerald, the balance of this group, are expected to make much headway.

Of the 12 candidates for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State, former City Councillor George Gilbody of Dorchester, Dr. Joseph Santosuosso of Boston and Arthur G. Flynn of Cambridge are looked upon as having the best chance.

HURLEY HAS FIGHT

State Auditor Hurley has three opponents. Of these, Leo A. Spillane, the former state adjutant of the American Legion, is the most serious contender.

State Senator John P. Buckley of Charlestown is thought to have the best chance of the six contesting for the Democratic nomination for attorney-general. Ordinarily Harold W. Sullivan, son-in-law of former Lieut.-Gov. Barry, who won the nomination two years ago, would be expected to repeat, but the presence of another Sullivan on the ballot, Raymond E., of Brighton, is almost sure to confuse the voters and split this vote.

Apart from the statewide contests, the most spirited contests are in Boston. William Michael Prendible's right to continue as clerk of the superior court is being challenged by City Registrar James J. Mulvey of Roxbury, W. C. S. Healey of East Boston and Daniel A. McLaughlin of the South End.

MULVEY IN ROW

Prendible is being given the edge by the observers, although Mulvey is putting up a hard fight. The present court clerk has the support of Martin Lomasney.

A last minute development of this contest is the demand by Mrs. John R. Campbell of Dorchester, widow of the late superior court clerk, for a public apology from Mulvey.

Mrs. Campbell asserts that she and her family have been "greatly worried by your false accusations made over the radio and in the press to the effect that my husband obtained the nomination in 1928 by fraud."

Another spirited contest is that for Sheriff of Suffolk County. Sheriff John A. Keliher is being opposed by City Councilor John F. Dowd, Dr. Joseph W. Lyons and Michael W. Ober. Keliher is expected to win.

PRIMARIES IN THREE STATES TUESDAY

(By The Associated Press)

Primary campaigns close today in New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin, and tomorrow's balloting will end most of the state intraparty contests for congressional and gubernatorial nominations.

In several districts of both the two eastern states prohibition figures prominently. Wisconsin's voting will measure the strength of the LaFollette and anti-LaFollette wings of the Republican party.

With these three contests over, only the Democratic and Republican conventions in New York, party conclaves in Rhode Island and New Mexico, and a few run-off primaries remain before all candidates square off for the November election. They will be disposed of by the middle of October.

LA FOLLETES IN BATTLE

In Wisconsin, the LaFollettes and Sen. Blaine have waged a fight against former Gov. Walter J. Kohler on taxation and other economic issues. Gov. Philip LaFollette, aided by his brother Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, have advocated "redistribution of wealth" by taxation.

Sen. Blaine is seeking renomination against John B. Chapple, Republican editor of Ashland, who charged him with radicalism.

BAY STATE CONTESTS

William J. Donovan, former assistant attorney-general, and F. Trubee Davidson, Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, are the outstanding contenders for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Gov. Joseph B. Ely, Democrat, has no opposition for renomination in Massachusetts. Four Republicans, including Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman, are seeking their party's support to oppose Ely.

The contest between Rep. Robert Luce of the Ninth Massachusetts District, who is standing on the national Republican prohibition platform, Ralph W. Hobart, a repeal advocate, and William H. Murphy, has attracted much attention in the Bay State.

VICTORY IS SEEN FOR COAKLEY

Daniel H. Coakley, the stormy petrel of the Democratic party, today was said by political observers to be en route to election to the Governor's Council—and his first personal political triumph since his disbarment from the practice of law ten years ago.

Coakley is one of seven candidates in the Boston councillor district, in which the nomination is the equivalent of election.

His disbarment by the Supreme Court was dragged in as an issue and he has readily accepted that challenge and has waged an aggressive campaign for vindication by the voters.

"The Supreme Court found me 'guilty,' thus sustaining its own record," he asserts, "but the good people of Boston, who will decide this election tomorrow, know that I was exonerated by one judge and two juries which later tried the very charges on which the Supreme Court had rendered against me.

"This is the first time that I have since explained my record and the people of Boston will judge me fairly because they have no axes to grind or special interests to serve. They are interested only in justice."

Bolivians Accused of Slaying Captives

Asuncion, Paraguay, Sept. 19 (AP)—The ministry of war today charged Bolivian troops at Fort Boqueron with decapitating prisoners taken during the 10-day battle there. Officers also claimed a Bolivian plane bombed a Red Cross hospital.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS 11TH DISTRICT

Frankly outspoken and courageous men in public circles are an all too rare occasion in this day and age, so that it is interesting to learn that James H. Brennan, prominent Boston attorney and only Democratic member of the governor's council, plans to run for Congress, resigning his post on the governor's council and stating his reasons for so doing very frankly. He pointed out that the council, largely a Republican one, has devoted itself to an obstructionist policy, in view of the fact that the governor is a Democrat. He states further that while he has had 20 years of public life, he is the youngest member of the council by 14 years, the other members having antiquated views.

James H. Brennan

As a result of his dissatisfaction, he is now preparing to oppose Congressman John J. Douglass, the present incumbent.

CANDIDATE FOR ATTY. GENERAL

Senator John P. Buckley of Boston, one of the Democratic candidates for the office of Attorney-General, has served in the Massachusetts Legislature for the past eight years.

John P. Buckley

He represented Charlestown for four years in the House of Representatives, serving on the committee on legal affairs in 1925-1926 and also the committee on judiciary in 1927-1928.

He has served in the Senate since 1929, representing Charlestown, East Boston, the North End, West End and South End, serving on the rules, judiciary, labor and industry, State administration and military affairs committees. During 1931 and 1932 he was the Democratic floor leader in the Senate, being the representative of Governor Joseph B. Ely.

He is a past commander of Bunker Hill Post of the American Legion and also a past state treasurer of the Massachusetts Department of the Legion.

He is a graduate of Boston University Law School and has been a practicing attorney for 17 years.

WORRIED WRITERS IN OLD AND NEW COMPLAINTS

By GILBERT SELDES

The names of the writers change and the names of their books are different, but the writers keep on saying the same things, and one of the things they like best to say is that they cannot write in America because America isn't the proper background. A considerable amount of noise was made on this subject between 1920 and 1925, and one of the different ways of saying the same thing was saying that "America has no tradition." A tradition is a habit of mind or habit of living handed down from generation to generation—and the very protest against America is a tradition in itself. Not only James Fenimore Cooper complained about our backwoods vulgarity, but "the first man of letters to appear on the American continent," Philip Freneau wrote "Barbers cannot possibly exist as such among a people who have neither hair nor beards... how, then, can a poet hope for success in a city where there are not three persons possessed of elegant ideas?" He had to write alone, "assisted by no poets of the plain." So he longed for Europe.

GILBERT SELDES

Setting America Free

The quotations above come to me in V. F. Calverton's Liberation of American Literature which Scribners have just published. It is a further volume in the unofficial series started by Van Wyck Brooks in 1915 when he began to build up the past of America and make it part of our inheritance. Ludwig Lewisohn's Expression in America which came out last year, is one of the best examples of the new spirit in regarding American Literature, a spirit which has nothing to do with the class room and which does not set Washington Irving and Walt Whitman into different compartments, but tries to show the connection between them.

Mr. Calverton is not saying what Freneau said; he is only saying that American writers have suffered from the colonial complex which made us slaves to England, and then from Calvinism which degenerated into Victorianism, and finally from the horrible circumstances that all American writers (until two o'clock yesterday afternoon) had a petty bourgeois psychology. In short, Freud and Marx have joined hands and are dancing around the Maypole, but the Maypole looks suspiciously like a scaffold.

Poor Old Bourgeoisie

I assure you that Calverton's book has many fine things in it, many good distinctions; for instance, "with the Puritan, the stress had been upon character: with the wealthy bourgeoisie the emphasis was upon reputation." Any time a modern writer has even a backhanded compliment for the Puritan, that's news. Calverton is writing an interior history of America, by way of its novelists and poets; he knows that America pushed its frontier westward until, having reached the Pacific, it could go no further and began to explore the frontiers of industry and imperialism. He shows that our writers were influenced by the events about them; he says, guardedly, that he isn't writing pure literary criticism. Yet you cannot help thinking that to him the importance of any writer lies in the help that writer has given to the proletarian revolution.

On Dancing

On things not in the communist line, Mr. Calverton can be very amusing. I haven't read anything funnier in years than his remarks on jazz and dancing: "Since the war, the dance has become a mania. It is the mad, delirious dance of men and women who have had to seize upon something as a vicarious outlet for their crazed emotions. . . . Jazz has provided that escape in increasing measure as its jubilant antics and rhythms have become madder and madder in their tumult of release." I wonder if Mr. Calverton has ever looked at people dancing and noticed the glazed eye, the absorbed look, the general dullness as they move slowly and solemnly around the floor. Of course, if he is describing the waltz, I can understand what he means by tumult and all the rest of it; but jazz dancing is very quiet.

Not a Communist

However, I have read myself out of the record; I cannot criticize any proletarianate book because I have petty bourgeois ideology in my blood. This doesn't prevent me from knowing that I'm a Fool is probably the best single story Sherwood Anderson ever wrote and that it hasn't any more economic significance than a fly has; and that it was published in a magazine called The Dial which had more to do with the liberation of American writers than nine-tenths of the magazines Mr. Calverton mentions. But it was petty bourgeois; so Mr. Calverton has discreetly omitted it from his history altogether.

R. R. Executives Hail Plans of Roosevelt as Helpful

By International News Service.

Gov. Roosevelt's six-point program for rehabilitation of the railroads, outlined in his Salt Lake City speech Saturday, was hailed by railway heads today as well as by congressional and railroad labor leaders both here and in Washington.

Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central, said:

"I heard Gov. Roosevelt's address and gathered from it the conviction that he is trying to be genuinely helpful toward the problems confronting the railroads.

"Some details of the plan as he outlined it may not commend themselves to railway executives. It should be said in all candor, however, that railroad men themselves are not in complete agreement on the best means of rectifying the situation besetting them."

HEARTENS 30,000,000.

J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, said:

"I regard Gov. Roosevelt's speech at Salt Lake City as a very constructive statement concerning the situation of the railroads. It should hearten all those who have a financial stake in the railroads, and there are 30,000,000 people with such a stake."

Lenor F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, said:

"I thought Gov. Roosevelt's radio address from Salt Lake City was very sympathetic to the railroads. He showed he had an appreciation of the complexity of the questions facing them for solution. He has manifestly pondered these problems earnestly, and the general tone of his address was thought-provoking and stimulating."

WILLARD IN ACCORD

Daniel A. Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, said he was "quite in accord" with the "spirit" of Roosevelt's railroad policy. Although asserting that there is no essential difference between the Governor's views and those held by Republican leaders, Willard added:

"Gov. Roosevelt has well and clearly stated the problem of the railroads and in so doing has taken that very important economic question out of the field of political controversy, where it never should have been."

H. R. Kurrie, president of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville, said:

"I heard the speech over the radio and believe it was one of the most constructive speeches ever made by a candidate for a high political office."

"I thought what a strange thing it was that she should have praised what turned out to be her own tomb.

LEAVES CORNER OPEN

"After we had all but the corner, about two and one-half feet by six feet finished, DuBois told me that was all he was going to do for the present. I later went to their home at Tuckahoe, N. Y., leaving this section of the floor unfinished.

"As I said before, it was about two and one-half feet wide and six feet long.

"When I asked him in July why he had left that part of it undone, he said he planned to make a base for the washing machine in that corner of the cellar and wanted the elevation to be higher than the other part of the cellar. I thought no more about it.

"I returned to Braintree from Tuckahoe on the morning of August 13.

"DuBois came to my home and said that "Dede" had gone to Montreal on a trip, and he thought it would do her a lot of good as she had not been feeling well.

"The next day I saw him again an said: 'What's the good news, Charlie?'

TELLS OF HER DEATH

"He said: 'No good news at all. "Dede" was in an automobile accident with two friends. They were killed outright, but "Dede" lived 18 hours.'

"I asked him if he was going to see about the body. He said no, it wasn't necessary.

"He asked me to go over to the Braintree house to see Dolly, the dogf, as he was going to Boston.

"I thought it was suspicious that he said no more about "Dede's" death and was so little interested in the body.

"On August 18 or 19 he asked me to go to the camp with him at Plymouth. When we went to bed he asked me to leave the door open between our connecting rooms. He said he felt kind of lonely. He had never asked me anything like that before, but at the time it made no impression on me.

BARES CRYPT VISIT.

"Since the suicide and the finding of the body I realized we were sleeping right over the body that night. The next day he told me he wanted to finish the cellar. I went down the cellar with him and found that he had already laid the gravel on the unfinished section, all ready to pour the cement over it.

"He stood near the edge, and would not let me get near that section. He told me to mix the cement and sand, which I did. When I brought thefirst shovel of cement over to put on the gravel, he stopped me and got down on his knees to bar the way.

"He said 'You throw the cement here, Larry,' indicating a place about two feet from the unfinished section. As fast as I would throw the cement there, he would place it on the gravel with his trowel, and smooth it over.

"I thought it strange that he would not save time by letting me throw the cement direcly on he gravel, but I could never get nearer than two feet of the section.

WORKS ON HIS KNEES

"He took great care in smoothing the cement, remaining on his knees all the time. He smiled and chattered while we were doing the work. He did not appear any different than he ever did.

"When he finished, he stood up and said 'My back is about broken.' I had to smile at that as I had been doing all the work. He generally took the easy part.

"When I read in the papers that Mrs. DuBois was buried under that cement, I could scarcely believe it. The tough part of it was to think that my hands helped innocently, to finish the job.

"I saw Grace Atwood in the cottage after DuBois announced that his wife had been killed. They were just sitting down chatting when I saw them. I also drove to Tuckahoe with them from Plymouth. Charlie and Grace Atwood sat in the front seat and I sat in the back seat and slept most of the way.

"I didn't pay any attention to what they were talking about. I simply noticed that he appeared to like her and she appeared to like him.

"While Charlie and I were standing together one day, Charlie said: 'What do you think of her?' He referred to Miss Atwood. I said: 'Oh, she seems all right, but I want to tell you that you'll never get another to compare with "Dede".'

"When I thought of how 'Dede' used to wait on him and look out for his home comfort I could not see how he could be interested in any other girl so soon after her death.

"Mrs. Benjamin Heinlein who was 'Dede's' closest woman friend, said to me at the grave today, 'It's an outrage to bury them together in the same grave. "Dede" wouldn't want it after what he did to her.'

"And I say the same thing."

How Nominees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Sept. 19—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

ROOSEVELT IN SWEEP OF WEST

By COLE E. MORGAN

Washington, Sept. 19 (US)—The Roosevelt sweep of the Far West manifest from the outset of the nationwide presidential poll of Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, shows

The best President Hoover has been able to do is to reduce by 1 or 2 per cent in two or three states the Roosevelt share of the total poll voted recorded.

Returns of the last week showed a loss of one point in Roosevelt's percentage in California and Idaho, and 2 per cent in Washington.

However, in California Roosevelt still holds 68 per cent in Washington 63 percent, and in Idaho 56 per cent of the poll vote. In the other six states of the Far West the percentages stand as they did a week ago.

INSULL CRASH MAY HELP BRING POWER CONTROL

By M. L. RAMSAY

Washington, Sept. 19 (INS)—Democratic and progressive champions of federal utility regulation saw a powerful impetus for their program today in investors' losses of hundreds of millions of dollars from the collapse of the Insull utility empire.

More than any other development in years, this disaster has spotlighted the lack of public control over holding companies, the flood of securities they loose upon investors and the accuracy of their financial statements.

Hammering hard on the same points have come new disclosures by the Federal Trade Commission of holding company profiteering and a federal power commission disclosure of a strangehold on power by a handful of interrelated combinations.

DIFFICULTIES IN WAY

The power commission, lately "gone progressive," is lending support to projected holding company teulgation, extending to securities and accounts.

Attempts to establish such regulation when Congress convenes are assured. Progressives recognize three great difficulties to be surmounted in their moves for legislation immediately.

One is the shortness of the session.

Another is the lack of assurance that President Hoover would approve effective securities and accounting control, even though he has espoused "federal reguiation of interstate power."

CAN'T EXAMINE THEM

Reaching the "investment companies," which in the last few years have capped the pyramids of holding companies, and which no public agency has yet been able to peer into, is the third problem.

Both the power commission and the trade commission have pointed to them as the seats of ultimate control. Neither, thus far, has been able to examine them.

Crime Shows Drop in New York State

Albany, Sept. 19 (AP)—Police reports filed with the Department of Correction show a decrease in major crimes committed in New York State during the first six months of 1932 as compared with the corresponding period a year ago.

THEORY PRIEST DIED SUICIDE IS PROBED

Fall River, Sept. 19—Although the Rev. Stanislaus Sleinis, former pastor of the American Lithuanian National Church of Lawrence, on his death bed accused Joseph Turek, 19, of giving him poison, which later resulted in his death, authorities are considering the possibility that the clergyman might have ended his own life.

Turek, whom Fr. Sleinis accused in the presence of police, was arraigned in District Court on the charge of murder today and held without bail. Albert Cilcius, 37, of Lawrence, was held in $500 as a material witness.

A few hours before his death on Saturday, the priest pointed a finger at Turek and said:

"You're a bad boy, ole. You took my $200 and gave me poison. I'm going to die. You should be punished."

Turek told the police he had given the priest powders which he had purchased on the written order of Fr. Sleinis and that he did not know what the note called for.

A testament, written by the priest, which police think may throw new light on the death of Fr. Sleinis, reads, in part:

"Let the heavens curse all who have caused my death. I could not stand the pain in my heart because of the people's gossip about me. Unlucky were those hours when I became the reverend of the National Church. I did not find God's kingdom, but only Satan."

The former Lawrence pastor came here a few days after resigning his pastorate and went to live with Rev. Wladyslaw Dynewicz, pastor of the Holy Trinity Church here.

Soon after his arrival, he complained of being ill. A physician said he was poisoned. Medical Examiner Thomas E. Boylan will perform an autopsy.

E. E. Clive Gets Ovation and Adds New Triumph in "The Squeaker"

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The re-opening of the Copley, with scarcely any hesitation, was turned into more of a general glorification party for Mr. E. E. Clive than the re-dedication of a temple. The proceedings were packed with enthusiasm. Even the deceased author of the play, Edgar Wallace, wrote unerringly for Mr. Clive's first entrance in "The Squeaker." An angry editor greets his slovenly reporter with: "Well, I'm glad to see you back again." The big first night audience accepted the line at face value, and for a second time Mr. Clive was compelled to fumble with an umbrella and wait for a chance to speak a word in his own defense.

* * *

Although "The Squeaker" has been blessed with some moderate success in London, it does not, on the whole reveal Mr. Wallace at his best. Naturally, it is generously sprinkled with crime and mystery, under-cover men and underworld prowlers. It imparts more comedy than mystery, which, perhaps, is a good thing for Mr. Clive, who in his golden days at the Copley, rather bore down upon us with English mystery drama. As a more or less doddering old newspaper man, with an instinct for crime detection, Mr. Clive made the play not only interesting but constantly jovial. The sins of the evening were quickly forgotten—at least forgiven—by as good an individual performance as the Copley stage has ever seen. And in the past, Mr. Clive has turned in some meritorious work as a character comedian on the same stage.

* * *

Crime and Humor

The untiring and prolific Mr. Wallace seldom varied his dramatic conceptions, so "The Squeaker" bears a fairly faithful imprint of the author's notion of what constitutes good and safe theatrical fare. You may honestly question his set-up of an editorial in a Metropolitan newspaper, for we have never seen anything to match it. But you are unable to withdraw your interest from the characters and situations woven into his story. Mr. Clive, of course, bears up under the major responsibility; he is a snooper who really snoops; he runs down crime by scent, by hunch and, what is better still, by the exercise of intelligent skipping about in the right places. He is a good reporter.

To a stranger within the gates, the performance of "The Squeaker" must have appeared like an ovation to a long lost and dearly beloved brother. The audience did everything except drag in the Scriptural fatted calf. Mr. Clive, as you should know, handled himself with discretion and with a fine sense of what was expected of the principal actor. Mr. Wallace has written better plays, but none that we can remember has revealed more fetching comedy. The author, in this case, has made a lot of honest fun out of some rather dirty deeds. And Mr. Clive makes it worth the telling.

* * *

Many New Faces

Several newcomers to Copley audiences crossed the stage and for the most part they fared well. Peggy Hovenden, as the unwilling victim of man's cupidity, won sympathy by a straightaway performance; Gordon Nelson proved an interesting stranger in the narrative and finally turned up as one of Scotland Yard's best men, and Stanley Harrison, as a night club man of all trades, handled his one big scene in a fashion that was suspiciously natural. "The Squeaker" is more humorous than criminal, but it shows a comfortably fair balance in the sins of the world.

Alice White to Stage Film Comeback in Warners' 'Employes' Entrance'

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—Alice White is coming back to the screen. And her comeback will be made via Warners-First National. A decidedly interesting piece of news if you know your Hollywood history.

Harriet Parsons

First National was the scene of Alice's box office triumphs. And it was after her quarrel with the Burbank studio that she slid suddenly and mysteriously to cinema oblivion. Now, after two years' absence from the screen (with the exception of a couple of independents she hasn't made a film) she's been handed a Warner Brothers contract and one of the lead roles in "Employes' Entrance."

The little White girl broke house records all over the country on her extended personal appearance tour. She was always a fan-made and not a studio-built star and there's no doubt that her many admirers will welcome the chance to prove their loyalty at the box office.

What with both Bow and White back on the screen it's going to seem like old home week.

* * *

Comedy Their First

This sounds like a real inspiration. Paramount is going to marry the very funny Mary Boland and the ditto hilarious Charlie Ruggles. Only cinematically speaking, of course. "As Husbands Go," Rachel Crothers' amusing comedy of married life, has been purchased by Paramount and will serve as the first of a series of husband-and-wife mirth-provokers with Mary and Charlie illustrating the problems of matrimony.

* * *

M-G-M Buys Play

How these studios scurry to skim the cream from the New York theatre. "Another Language," smash hit of the current Broadway season, has just been purchased by M.-G.-M. You'll remember Mary Pickford flew East to view the Rose Franken play, size up its film possibilities. And other movie producers showed more than passing interest. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, having won the tilt, will probably use "Another Language" as a vehicle for Helen Hayes.

* * *

Around the Studios

Mae West got lonesome for her pet Simian (monkey to you) and wired for it. Zeppo Marx's first official gesture with that new deputy sheriff badge was to remove Charlie Lederer from a party when Charlie started singing off key. Preston Foster, who played killer Mears in Tiffany's "Last Mile" got himself manicured for the first time in 13 years t'other day. Charlie MacArthur, demonstrating a trick, shattered one of Colleen Moore's best glasses at Colleen's party the other eve. Whereupon spouse Helen Hayes murmured resignedly: "That's why we're known as the one-invitation MacArthurs!"

Thrill Tale Is Told on Screen

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"The Most Dangerous Game," film featured at RKO Keith's, vigorously presents an unusual theme, and the perfection of its technique and an expert use of the camera give it an excellence above any other of its kin of the "horror" type. On stage, Roger Wolfe Kahn and his band top one of the best programs in several weeks.

The motion picture is really that—action is its key, once it gets into full swing. There are sequences so pulsing in their tense drama, and the magic lens sweep, that they give the whole a classic quality. This is something not too often achieved in the Hollywood output; the high level here is due to the cleverness of Merian Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack.

Weird Angles

The story has its weird angles. A madman, seeking a new thrill, invents a new hunt. Man is his quarry. Shipwreck snares his victims. In turn, except the one woman, they become his prey. Chiefly, the picture is given to the enactment of the great chase, wherein Joel McCrea and Fay Wray match their wits and their endurance against the fiend, played by Leslie Banks.

Banks turns in one of the great roles of the year, his acting being a great help in the problem of giving realism to the panorama.

Comedy Abounds

The Kahn-oisseurs, with their young leader, establish their right to the vaudeville bill's peak place. They play very well, and evolve comedy features, as well as artistic effort. "The Radio Rubes" could easily be the headliners, for they "stop the show." The quartette sings and patters amiably, and often, niftily. The chap who has the "orchestra in his nose and throat" had the house calling for more.

All Feminine Talent in Stage Presentation at RKO Boston

By HARRIS MORGAN

An all-feminine stage show and "Bird of Paradise" on the screen are the RKO Boston features this week. In a bill providing variety and balance, the gentle sex reveals all the necessary talent, and the song, dance and comedy are up to a high standard.

Joel McCrea

Of the numerous featured personalities, perhaps the biggest hit is that made by Cherry Blossom and June. Though this is their third appearance within six months on local stage the sisters are as strong as ever to win the audience. The wee Mam'selle Cherry in her work develops the fastest tempo we have ever seen in a dancer and June gives able aid, both in the singing and the stepping.

Redhaired Nell Kelly is one of the peppiest of singing comediennes, and she has a repertory of snappy numbers. It is rare that one can say that a singer's entire group is stellar, but that is what may be recorded of Miss Kelly's work. She is also a fast stepper.

Of the many other featured girls, special mention may be made of Alice Frohman, "find" of the season; the Davis-Newton comedy team, and the Steele Sisters and their Syncopators.

"Bird of Paradise," thanks to the skill of King Vidor in direction, is both an entertaining film story and striking for its camera technique. The princial roles are satisfactorily handled by Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea.

Will Rogers on Two Screens

Pike Peters carries on. That is to say, Will Rogers continues the humor of the role he made famous, in his latest picture, "Down to Earth." Irene Rich is in the cast, and she like the star, excellently shares in the fun and [illegible] of the Peters family in Oklahoma, following her cinematic jaunt in "They had to See Paris." David Butler's direction is standard.

"Down to Earth" is currently on the Fenway and Modern screens, along with another good first-run movie, "Big City Blues," wherein Joan Blondell and Eric Linden get the most out of their parts in this tale of metropolitan temptations, perils and romance.

Role in "Flesh"

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

More Than 25 Pounds. ↑ But 'Tis Often Done.
Many Precious Years. Recall Freckled Bob?
Walker to Give Away. ↓ Other Gaint Killers.

The Bigger They Are, the Harder They Fall

"THE BIGGER THEY ARE, the 'arder they fall," remarked Bob Fitzsimmons as he sunk his big, bony, freckled fist wrist deep in the deck line of Big Ed Dunkhorst, causing Ed's big fat tummy to wrap itself around Fitz's maulie like wet clothes around a washerwoman's stick and Big Ed to expire with an agonized grunt which even our modern wrestlers never have been able to emulate. "A good big man will beat a good little man," is one of the most ancient of ring axioms. In which saying rests the most truth will be demonstrated in the Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City, next Monday night, when in the big bout in aid of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund, Smiling Mickey Walker, will essay to give Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world, 25 pounds and a licking.

TWENTY-FIVE POUNDS, or more. Walker will scale in the neighborhood of 166 pounds and Schmeling will tip the beam around 192. More than 25 pounds of beef and bone. That's a big advantage to spot a former champion of the world. To the Black Uhlan the little fighting Mick from the Kerreighhead section of Elizabeth, N. J., also is giving away a corresponding advantage in reach and height. What is more, Smiling Mickey is giving away a half dozen or so most valuable years. Herr Schmeling has youth and all the magic qualities that go with it, youth tempered by seasoning and experience, in his favor. Max is at the peak of physical and pugilistic proficiency, right at the crest of his ring career. Walker is no longer a chicken. Mickey is past 31. Behind him are a dozen rigorous years of ring campaigning, half of which have been spiced with gay times along the Broadways of the world.

CONSIDERING ALL these things you would think that Walker faces an almost insurmountable handicap. But old Bob Fitzsimmons, before him scaled an even higher barrier, gave away even more pounds and years. And what the old Cornishman did perhaps the smiling warrior with the blood of Brian Borou, Cuchulain, Finn MacCumhail—Finn McCool he has come to be known by—and other Celtic heroes flowing in his veins, also can do. Remember it was only a few short weeks ago that Smiling Mickey held Jack Sharkey to a draw and then Sharkey went out and beat Schmeling. You certainly must concede a chance to the fighting little terror who held even the man who beat the Black Uhlan.

DO YOU THINK Max Schmeling is a better fighter than old Tom Sharkey? We don't. And we have seen both the ancient sailorman and the Black Uhlan in many ring battles. Why, that little, sawed off Hercules with shoulders as wide as a barn door, chest like a bellying sail, a neck like a bull, arms like twin oaks and the devil in his heart, who for 25 blistering bersark rounds ripped and slashed and tore like a bulldog at the giant Jeffries, would have battered Max Schmeling to a bloody pulp any time he clambered into the ring with the Teuton Schlager. And yet one short year after Tom gave Jeffries that soul stirring 25 round battle at Coney Island Sharkey in the very same ring was knocked out in two rounds by old Bob Fitzsimmons!

TWELVE DAYS BEFORE Fitz's jig time knockout of Tom Sharkey, the toughest, ruggedest heavyweight that ever breathed, Bob had rocked the giant Gus Ruhlin to sleep in 6 rounds. The Akron Giant was no false alarm. Gus probably could beat Schmeling. Only the recognized skill and science of Jack Sharkey and Tunney would return Jack and Jene a winner on points over the big burly bruiser from the Akron foundries. In the short space of 12 days Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out two of the greatest heavyweights in the ring, Tom Sharkey and Gus Ruhlin. Remember Fitzsimmons weighed less than Mickey Walker. Also remember that old Bob was 38 years of age at the time. So those of you who think Mickey Walker's task of spotting Max Schmeling 25 pounds and a half a dozen years is a hopeless one remember old Ruby Robert!

IT WAS BILLY RODENBACH, we think, who put up the greatest exhibition between a little man and a big man that ever was fought. Billy was an amateur from New York. He was amateur middleweight champion. He journeyed out to San Francisco to fight giant Sam Berger for the national amateur heavyweight championship. Berger was a protege of Jim Jeffries. Sam was so sure of beating Rodenbach that he added some of his own money to the sum San Franciscoans raised to purchase a costly cup for the winner of the heavyweight title. Rodenbach spotted Berger something like 40 pounds. Billy broke his left hand in an early round. The left hand is a fighter's best hand. Despite the useless left hand Rodenbach fought on with his right to chop Berger into boarding house hash and win the amateur championship of the United States!

ALL THE ODDS are against Mickey Walker in next Monday night's big battle. So were all the odds against Fitzsimmons, Rodenbach, Walcott, Choynski, Levinsky, Greb, Dillon, Langford—recall the battle Sam, when only a little more than a welterweight, gave Jack Johnson over in Chelsea?—and many other little uns against the big uns. On paper Schmeling "figures" to handily beat Walker. But Jack Sharkey "figured" to cut and slash Mickey into ribbons. Yet Sharkey, who beat Schmeling, only held Walker to a draw. What's the answer? We dunno. Let 'em answer it in the ring next Monday.

45 WRITERS PICK YANKS; 2 FAVOR CUBS

By FRANK G. MENKE

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—Fifty sports editors and writers, taking International News Service, were paged for their opinion as to the outcome of the World Series, with this rather astonishing result:

Only two picked the Cubs.
Forty-five named the Yankees.
The other three were not decided.

Here are the opinions:

SID KEENER, sports editor, St. Louis Star and Times—"The Yankees will win. They have too much driving power for the Cubs. However, hard hitting American League champions have been stopped in the past by National League pitching. Remember the Cardinals of 1926 and 1931."

WAGNER PICKS YANKS

RALPH WAGNER, Omaha Bee News—"Have to string with the Yankees. They have the power, plus an edge in experience."

HOWARD PURSER, sports editor, Wisconsin News, Milwaukee—"Punch, pitching and superior leadership will win the championship for the Yankees, with the Cubs never threatening."

J. S. LYMAN, Herald, Sharon, Pa.—"Yanks appear to be more steady and with Ruth in the lineup they'll win."

A. R. FLENNER, sports editor, Tyrone (Pa.) Daily Herald—"The Yankees can't lose. They are riding the crest of a big push which is something we can't say about the Cubs."

JOHN SNOW, Springfield, (Mo.) Leader—"Mark Koenig ought to go great against his old mates, but even with Koenig, Cuyler, Grim and Stephenson at their best, I don't see how the Cubs are going to match base hits with the Yankees. I can't see that the Cubs have an advantage in pitching."

BILLY LOFTUS, Wilkesbarre Evening News—"Yankees should win because the team is consistent, better offensively and has more dependable defense."

DAVE DE LONG, sports editor, Chronicle and News, Allentown, Pa.—"The Yanks will win. They possess tremendous batting power, seasoned and good pitching.

SYMPATHIES WITH CUBS

FRED W. TUERK, sports editor, The Peoria (Ill.) Star—"Pitching and slugging being the essential factors, the Yankees are my choice although my sympathies are with the Cubs."

JOHN KEYS, sports editor, Michigan City (Ind.) News—"The Cubs will win due to a stronger pitching staff and a spirit that will bring out better baseball than they have been credited with being able to play."

ED PRELL, Chicago American—"When two teams meet in a world series you might as well flip a coin to decide the winner but I like the Yankees.

ED GEIGER, sports editor, Chicago American—"Two good teams always make a good fight. Breaks mean much. I'm pulling for the home team, but my judgment makes me pick the Yanks."

BUD SHAVER, sports editor, Detroit Times—"I think the Yankees will beat the Cubs, but look for a close, hard fought series."

W. S. FARNSWORTH, sports editor, New York Evening Journal—"I like the Yankees. The Cubs have no left-handed pitched except Jakie May, a relief pitcher, and the Yanks have the better pitchers and much more offensive power."

CORUM LIKES CUBS

BILL CORUM, New York Evening Journal: "The Yankees figure to be favorites, but not the 2 to 1 favorites they are now being quoted around New York. World Series are decided by pitching, and as I see it the pitching staffs are pretty evenly balanced in this case, with the Cubs having a slight edge. A tough series, but I'd take the Cubs at 2 to 1."

LEO GOATES, sports editor Salt Lake City Desert News: "The Yankees will carry too many heavy guns for the Cubs and will match the Wrigley team in defense."

Yankee-Bred Horses Win Mussolini Event

Rome, Italy, Sept. 19 (AP)—Four American-bred horses, owned by Italian sportsmen, accounted for the first four places in the final trotting race for the Mussolini Cup today.

The two and one-half kilometer race, with its purse of $2500, was won by Jessamin in three minutes, twenty-one and 4-5 seconds.

GRID GAME IS MUCH SAFER, SAYS THORP

By LEWIS BURTON

New York, Sept. 19 (US)—Injuries from football will be reduced 75 per cent as a result of increased vigilance and changes in the rules for the coming season. This is on the authority of Ed Thorp, nationally famous football official.

According to Thorp, it is a conclusion drawn from his many years of experience in officiating at major games.

Thorp said today:

"The new rules against flying tackles and flying blocks, the new interpretation of the proper use of hands, and the cutting out of piling up and crawling will eliminate 60 per cent of the in-

Confident that his husky Crimson line will hold its own with anything in the East, Head Coach Eddie Casey will begin today to develop speed among his ball carriers. And judging from the training methods of the Harvard mentor, Casey will have his entire backfield squad legweary from foot races up and down the Stadium turf.

Of course that Harvard line, the biggest they've had at Cambridge in years, outweighing even last year's frontier, although there have been few changes since the 1931 campaign, will be the Crimson's main source of power on both offense and defense. Behind such a wall of strength, almost any set of ballcarriers would be effective.

But if Casey can speed up his regular backs a bit, and develop an offensive threat or two among the group of lighter backs on the squad, the new offensive, installed a year ago, may attain undreamed of success.

CRICKARD IS SPRINTER

Fortunately the ace of the Crimson backfield, Jack Crickard, is that creature rarely found in football togs, a track star. Crickard on innumerable occasions has hit 10 seconds flat for the century, and more than once during the off season has he donned his spikes to gather points for his alma mater.

This brilliant burst of speed which enables him to start like a flash, coupled with the ability to stop on a dime makes Crickard a hard man to down. And once he is in the clear, there are few college players who can match him. While he is depending upon Crickard to keep the Crimson up there, Coach Casey is bent on uncovering a few of the yet unblossomed stars on the squad.

A pair of lightweights who are bound to receive more than a little consideration are Tom Locke and Carl Pescosolido. Both of them lack by far the weight needed by a big time back. Locke weighs only 160 pounds, and is short in stature, while Pesky, the tiniest member on the team, weighs 10 pounds less, and is only 5 feet 6 inches. But both of them have speed to burn.

LOCKE VERY FAST

Locke, the star of the freshmen last fall, ran wild against all opponents. During the winter and spring seasons he is Harvard's finest quartermiler. This past spring, when still only a yearling, he turned in a 49 second quarter at the Greater Boston intercollegiates, which was good enough to beat the varsity time by two full seconds.

Pescosolido has been fast enough in the past to edge Crickard and the other Crimson sprinters in both the 100 and 220. While lack of size will prevent either of these two athletes from gaining a first team position in the starting lineups, their ability to run away from the opposition once in the open should make them dangerous behind a powerful line such as Harvard's.

Charlie Nevin, scaling 205 pounds and built on the lines of Al Miller, can gather up a lot of speed for a short distance, and makes an ideal line crasher. Quarterback Harry Wells is a better than average sprinter, who runs in an unorthodox manner.

GRADY MAY MAKE STAR

An absolute unknown as far as football is concerned, Johnny Grady, varsity high and low hurdler is being considered as a possible threat.

Grady is only a junior, is big and fast, and through inexperienced will amount to something. George Bennett, a junior, and Art Barrett, a pair of backs who pack plenty of weight, are under the coaches' eyes. Chester Litman, a freshman a year ago, and a former Brookline high athlete, may be promoted above the third eleven during the coming week if the Crimson mentor can see some way of making use of the sophomore's running ability.

The Crimson squad will continue with two sessions a day on Wednesday and Friday. But tomorrow and Thursday, practice will be held only in the afternoon, when the candidates will receive their first bit of scrimmaging. Tomorrow Casey will open up and if the squad escapes serious injury another scrimmage will be held on Thursday.

SHOT AT TITLE IS LOU'S GOAL

By JACK CONWAY

Morris Lemoine, manager of Lou Brouillard, popped into town today. He planned to confer with Matchmaker Bill Ames of the Boston Garden.

"Brouillard is in good condition and eager to keep active in the ring," said Lemoine. "I am ready to sign him for Boston bout with Jackie Fields. Andy Callahan or Johnny Indrisano.

"I have never picked Brouillard's opponents, and don't intend to start doing so now. Lou convinced me when he licked Jimmy McLarnin in New York that he is the greatest fighter of his weight in the world.

BROUILLARD IMPROVES

"Brouillard has improved a great deal as a boxer since he won the welterweight title from Young Jack Thompson in this city. He will regain the championship as soon as Fields gets into a ring with him."

It is understood the Boston Garden has offered Fields a guarantee of $25,000 with a privilege of 37½ per cent to meet Brouillard here. Fields has not accepted this offer yet. It begins to look as if the welterweight boss does not want any part of Brouillard.

Andy Callahan has been shooting at Brouillard for over a year. The Lawrence warrior weighed 141½ pounds when he scored his sensational one-round knockout over Young Lefty at Fall River last week. This indicates that Callahan is no longer able to make the lightweight limit of 135 pounds.

INDRISANO READY

Johnny Indrisano has been training at Pompton Lake, N. J., with Mickey Walker. The East Boston warrior is in good condition, and is ready to take on Brouillard.

It Must Be the Altitude!

Der Max Discovers He Can Read and Decides to Go Tunney on Us—Ain't It a Shame!

Special to the Evening American

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 19—Let it be recorded, with tears and lamentations, that Max Schmeling has succumbed to the cultural influence of the Fine Things in Life.

The Ferocious Frankfurter, who really should have sense enough to know better, is trying to out-Tunney the polysyllabic James Joseph Tunney, of blessed memory. He is, even his best friends admit, reading books. As a matter of fact, Joe Jacobs admitted yesterday, that his trip to New York City had more to do with finding Shakespeare in German than sparring partners.

MAX GONE HI-HAT

Schmeling has gone as highhat as a four-a-day ham suddenly given top billing, and what is infinitely harder on his acquaintances is that Schmeling, like Tunney, insists on trying to convince all comers that he is a Great Mind, and probably a Great Soul.

Of course, Der Maxie and Gene Tunney have a right to read a book. Or even, two books. But their broad A's acts are a pain in the neck, and even the intelligentsia of pugilism realizes it. But fighters never do. They are too busy trying to impress somebody how smart they are to realize they are ludicrous.

And when they learn that the higher the hat the sooner the snowball hits it, it's too late to do anything about it.

Tunney has retired from the ring to indulge in politics and all one can do for him is drop a tear. But Der Maxie is a young fellow with a future and it is a pity he should fall a victim to the fatal malady.

IT'S JUST TOO BAD

It is too bad that boxers discover that they can read.

The astounding fact that they can distinguish A from B is productive of cataclysmic results, and they go Tunney. All do not read Shakespeare and have photographs taken with Mr. Shaw, but they read two-syllable words and even three-syllable words, if they are feeling fit. And they might as well read four-syllable words, it all means the same in the end.

High hat pugs obtain a reputation as intelligent men merely because it is strange for a pug to be interested in subjects in which he professes an interest. With the general public, Tunney is an authority on Shakespeare, if not on the literature of all time. As a matter of fact, Tunney probably knows less about Shakespeare than any assistant English instructor in any jerkwater college.

NOT THE SAME MAX

His lecture at Yale failed to reveal any especially keen perception or any new conception and his literary works hardly are of a calibre to establish him as a literary giant. Reading the works of Tunney, one pictures him industriously fingering Roget's admirable aid to the mentally indigent and putting down the biggest words he could find. They look nice to sucker readers, but don't mean anything.

It's tough to see Schmeling up here and it is hard to visualize him as the poor German youth with the broken hand who arrived in New York unknown more than four years ago. He has fallen in love with the spot Tunney discovered and wants to pay $15,000 for the stone cottage in which he is quartered. Such a deal would make this his permanent training camp.

BUSH TO HURL SERIES OPENER

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP)—Responding to the cheers of a big homecoming crowd, Manager Charlie Grimm of the Cubs said he planned to shoot Guy Bush against the Yankees in the first game of the World Series.

Hundreds of fans jammed the station as the Cubs came home with a six-game lead over Pittsburgh.

"We had a successful road trip," Manager Grimm said. "Every team sent its best pitchers against us and we had to fight all the way, but we did well.

"When we left for the trip, we had a seven-game lead. Now it is six and we'll clinch the pennant tomorrow by beating Pittsburgh in the first game of the doubleheader. We plan to use Bush in the first game of the series and expect the Yankees to counter with Ruffing."

Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, Cub backstop who was spiked in Philadelphia, was up and around and expected to get back in the lineup tomorrow.

Dighton Marksman Wins Skeet Title

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept 19 (AP)—H. C. Hathaway of Dighton, Mass., with a total of 99 out of a possible 100, won the Great Eastern Skeet championship yesterday at the close of a two-days' competition.

Owing to darkness, second place in the individual event was undecided between H. C. Barstow of Rockville, Conn., and H. S. Roberts of East Hampton, N. Y., and the shoot-oof will be held later

Morfair Favored to Win

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—Morfair, owned and trained by J. P. Smith, was favored to win the Bayshore Handicap of seven furlongs feature of the opening card today at Aqueduct.

WALTHAM HAS SERIES LEAD

Waltham Town Team jumped into the lead in the Boston Twi League Little World Series when it stopped the Hopedales of Allston, 5 to 2, to take a 2-1 lead in games. The clubs battle again this evening at 5:15 o'clock at Victory Field, Watertown.

The largest crowd of baseball fans of the series was at Smith Field, North Brighton, yesterday. Foul lines were roped off, but the crowd jammed the outfield and the two-base rule was in vogue.

At Victory Field today there will be no need of limiting hits as the stands can take care of most of the crowd.

Waltham has its ace hurler, Slade, to toss against Allston. He has one win already in this series.

Thus far the series has been one of the best in years. Every game has been close and the fans are getting a real run for their money.

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

So, not to be outdone by Gene Tunney, the Republicans have dug up Tad Jones to run for Congress.

Tad's platform is simplicity itself: For God, for County, and for Ale.

Tad was unanimously nominated, and gracefully accepted the Congressional punt. But wait till he starts running the ball back in November.

The way the teams line up now, Tad will think those bac kslapping delegates were alumni with brass knuckles.

Mark our words, if Tad is elected there'll be foxes on the steps of the White House, and raccoon coats in Congress.

BRAVES MAKE LAST FIGHT FOR TOP DIVISION

THIRD PLACE POSSIBLE FOR TRIBE

By JOE CASHMAN

Having completed the home portion of their most successful season in a decade, the Braves are in New York today to continue their fight to grab off a money berth before the curtain falls on the 1932 campaign next Sunday.

The Warriors will play three single games with the Giants and then rest two days before ending up in single games with the Dodgers in Brooklyn on Saturday and Sunday.

As a result of their most prosperous Wigwam stay, during which they won 12 out of 18 games, the Tribesmen are 1½ games back of the fourth-place Phils and three games in the rear of the their class Brooklyn entry at the moment.

ODDS AGAINST TRIBE

So they still have a chance of finishing third. Unfortunately, though, the odds are against them gaining even fourth position.

If they win three out of five, the Dodgers will need to win only one out of five and the Phils only three out of six to stay ahead. And even if they win all five games, the best they will be certain of is a tie for fourth.

The brighter side of the story is that it is possible, if not probable, for the natives to land third place by taking four out of five and to tie for the berth by winning three out of five.

SEASON A SUCCESS

As far as Boston fans are concerned, Bill McKechnie and his boys will have done better than very well if they don't win another game.

And the Warriors must realize this, too, after the great tribute paid them in their final local appearance.

More than 20,000 of the faithful turned out on a not-too-warm afternoon to watch their heroes engage the seventh-place St. Louis Cardinals in two games that didn't mean a thing.

And the noise and enthusiasm of the gang would lead a stranger to believe that a championship hinged on the result of each conflict.

The cheering lasted for five minutes when Al Spohrer won the first game, 3 to 2, with a single that came with two out in the ninth.

FANS APPROVE TEAM

When a fifth-place club can attract that sort of support on the final day of its home season, it should have no doubt that it has performed in the most approved fashion.

The size of the throng was a distinct surprise to your correspondent, but he feels bound to add that it was no more than the Braves deserved.

They ran into more than enough bad breaks during the course of the race to discourage the most courageous of clubs, but never once did they show the white feather or even become indifferent in the slightest degree.

Especially are the pitchers to be applauded because, in the final analysis, the Tribal hurlers have been chiefly responsible for the fine showing of the outfit.

Struggling along most of the way without one consistent .300 hitter to lighten their burden, they should have become tired long since, yet the closing week of the race finds them just as effective as ever.

Ed Brandt won 15 games, Bobby Brown and Huck Betts came through with 14 victories, Ben Cantwell hung up 13 triumphs, Old Tom Zachary passed the ten mark and Fred Frankhouse came close to it.

Provided with a slightly stronger offensive supporting cast, these flingers promise to carry the Braves to the heights next season.

'PURE' BOXERS 'ON CARPET'

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP)—The amateur fight situation and championships held the foremost place among the questions to be discussed at the annual convention of the Nationa. Boxing Association which opened here today. Representatives from 29 member states and from New York, a non-member, were expected.

A boat trip down the Chesapeake bay was arranged for the first session today, with a stop at Annapolis to visit Governor Albert C. Ritchie and tour of the United States Naval Academy.

CLINNIN THE SPEAKER

Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the association, and Robert A. Sindall, chairman of the Maryland body, were the principal speakers on the program for the boat session. The group tonight will attend the boxing show at Twin City Arena at Laurel, Md.

Following an address of welcome tomorrow by Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, the association will be treated to a crab feast on the Magothy river. Governor Ritchie will speak at the dinner in the evening, after which the delegates will witness the wrestling show at Carlin's Park. Election of officers will feature the Wednesday session.

THE GREAT INVALID—

Out of a sick bed climbed the Babe to take a few lusty swings. And here you see him swinging lustily, but futilely, at the Yank Stadium where he hopes to wreck the Cubs next week. He was so weak the kids gave him the Bronx cheer.

TENNES WINS HEARST TROPHY

By WARREN BROWN

Chicago, Sept. 19 (US)—Shores of the north lagoon of the world's fair grounds were packed with humanity as drivers from all parts of the country strove for the William Randolph Hearst Gold Trophy, emblematic of the central division outboard motor championships.

This event, sponsored by the Herald and Examiner and Century of Progress Exposition, attracted a crowd that was estimated at more than 60,000.

CHICAGOAN VICTOR

The winner of the magnificent Hearst trophy turned up in Horace Tennes of Chicago, whose victories in two amateur five-mile events and a second place in another gained him sufficient points to merit the award.

Presentation of the Hearst and other throphies were made to the successful contestants in the court of the Hall of Science.

Dizzy Dean Has Last Laugh

The Chicago Cubs now need but two more victories to cinch the National League pennant. They dropped a half game on the Sabbath, when they beat the Reds in 15 innings, as the Pirates walloped the Giants twice, but they still lead by six games.

It doesn't do, apparently, to make fun of Dizzy Dean. Rabbit Maranville created plenty of laughs imitating Dizzy's antics in the second game of the Sabbath double-header at the Wigwam, but the tall Texan had the last laugh by fanning nine of the Braves and whipping them, 5 to 2.

"Ducky Wucky" Medwick lived up to all the good things the scouts have said about him in all three games against the Braves. The young Cardinal flychaser, who won Pepper Martin's centerfield berth, hit a double in the first game, a triple and a home run in Sunday's opener and another double in the night cap. He also shaped up like a fine fielder and showed he possesses a great arm and plenty of speed.

Lon Warneke, Cubs' wonder rookie, made his third attempt to win his 22d game of the season and failed against the Reds yesterday. He worked 11 innings during which he was found for 16 hits. Charlie Root finished up and received credit for the triumph.

Red Worthington is convalescing rapidly following the setting of his broken leg at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He expects to be released within the next fortnight and will then start for his home in Alhambra, Cal., by boat. Physicians say the popular Tribal outfielder should be as good as ever next season.

RULE CHANGES HELPFUL TO OFFICIALS

"By proper medical care, I mean this: If a boy develops a blister on his heel, and it is properly taken care of, blood poisoning won't set in. And the medical care applies to such things as seeing that the boys are padded properly."

Aside from the increase in safety, Thorp foresees a better season for officials. Each of the five principal changes, he believes, has simplified their labors. Considering them individually, he said:

"First, there's the rule on use of the hands. Heretofore a player could strike an opponent if his body followed his hand. The official had to keep his eyes sharpened to see if the two things went together.

"Now, if a player strikes a man in the head, it's a foul. He may push, but he can't strike, and all an official has to decide is whether it was a shove or a blow. If he can't decide that he oughn't be an official.

NO SLIP AND RUN BACKS NOW

"Second, the ball-carrier used to try getting up after he had dropped to his knees. The better officials were fast with the whistle for the good of the game. Some wern't. But now the ball-carrier may not run after dropping to his knees.

"Third, the rule permitting substitutes to enter the game at more frequent intervals hardly affects us. If anything, it simplifies our work because players can't come in unless there is time out.

"Fourth, the kickoff rule, which requires five men to stay down the field till the kick, helps us. The men won't be spread out so much, and they will be easier to watch.

Fifth, diving tackles and diving blocks, now barred, aren't hard to detect, and anyhow coaches will have their players schooled so that they won't be trying to do it."

NONE OF SPECTACLE LOST

The argument that some of the spectacle will be taken out of the game by these changes arouses no sympathy in Thorp.

"I've never seen a man fall, get up and make a run that amounted to anything," he explains. "But I've seen fellows fall, and try to get up, and then nearly get murdered when fellows came hitting him from all sides."

GRID BRAVES SHOW POWER IN DEBUT

While he was satisfied with the showing of his Braves grid team in their 25-0 win in its debut against the Quincy Trojans, Coach Lud Wray today declared that there was still much work to be done before the Tribe will be ready for Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers at the start of the pro grid season at Braves Field, October 2.

"Of Course," Wray declared, "we went into the game with the Trojans with the idea of running through a routine of the plays developed so far. I don't say we were under wraps, exactly, but then, again, I don't think you saw the Braves under full steam, either."

The initial test of the Braves was largely an opportunity to run through fundamentals against a team which had no inkling of the nature of the Braves' offense.

WRAY FINDS FLAWS

In this respect, Coach Wray declared that the strong Quincy eleven suited his purpose admirably. He discovered several items of more or less importance which would require a full week of attention, starting today.

A light session was scheduled at the Lynn camp following the first game of the season.

A second test for the Braves will be afforded when they stack up against the Beverly Pros in a night game at the Lynn G. E. field on the night of September 26.

U. OF PEABODY WANTS GAME

In the meantime, the University of Peabody eleven, a strong semi-pro organization, is making negotiations with Wray for a practice game some time before the Dodgers come to town to open the pro season in earnest.

The Trojans were folded up under a 25-0 runaway in the first exhibition of the Braves' prowess. Approximately 3500 fans were on hand for the game.

Touchdowns by Tony Plansky, Jim Musick and Cliff Battles left the Trojans dazed but game. The Quincy boys were shortenders on the weights as well as the score, and Coach Wray praised their work under the impossible odds.

Peck, Maderm and Connolly scored touchdowns, and Collins contributed an extra two points on a safety.

COACH CRISLER CAPT. BILLINGS

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 19—Herbert O. Crisler, new coach at Princeton, voiced some interesting observations today in comparing the business of coaching football in the State universities of the middle West an dthe ancient and endowed schools of the East.

In physique, he said, Eastern material averages well up with that of the hinterland—possibly, man for man, it may be a bit superior, but, in quantity, the material at colleges the size of Princeton and Dartmouth, or even Harvard and Yale, is not to be compared with the huge turnouts at any of the Big Ten schools except Chicago.

There is some compensation for the latter, however, the Princeton mentor says, in the fact that virtually every man enrolling for football in the endowed Eastern institutions comes up to the varsity with a pretty thorough knowledge of the game gained from the expert coaching received in prep schools and in many of the public high schools in this section.

KNOW FUNDAMENTALS

The bulk of the Western Conference material comes to the varsity with little or no knowledge of the game or after having learned bad football habits under the less efficient public school coaches of the West.

"Out in my country," he observed, "the college coach has to build from the ground up.

"The thing that stuck me so forcefully when I took over this Princeton assignment was the manner in which the backfield candidates comported themselves.

"There were a few sideline runners, but most of them seemed to have the idea that the progress has to be forward and not lateral if ground is to be gained, and they sidestepped, changed pace, straight-armed and did other things with that end in view—all of which has to be taught most of the Western backs.

CHANGING OFFENSE

"It is for that reason that I am changing somewhat the offense I used at Minnesota. There success had to be predicated on power plays, but here it will be speed and elusiveness."

As yet Crisler has made no attempt to arrive at definite lineups. He is primarily interested in developing and nurturing the interest of the squad. Many with possibilities, who had missed early selection, might become disheartened.

While the squad, numbering nearly 90, is the largest turnout in several years, it is small as compared to squads of 250 that answer the call at Minnesota and other Western universities.

TEAM OF VETS

It would be possible for him to line up a team made up almost entirely of varsity first stringers of last year, for Bill Yeckley and Walter Gahagan were the only full-season regulars lost by graduation last June, and Jack James the only first string back who did not return this year.

But several veterans are learning new jobs this season and there are a number of promising sophomores whose possibilities have yet to be learned.

Linemen have to be broken of the old hand-fighting habits acquired under the old system and which are taboo under the new rules.

They must master charging through, using their hands only on the shoulders. It will be those who most quickly grasp the new style of line play that will earn the starting positions on this Princeton team.

GOODMAN NO LONGER ON BLACK LIST

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—He's been licked now and, though as a result a Canadian holds the national amateur golf championship for the first time, doubtless all the brass hats are happy.

But doubtless, too, their thinly-veiled antagonism has created an impression that, underneath it all, Johnny Goodman may be somebody to disapprove of, whereas the contrary is quite the case.

The whole thing, in fact, is a reflection neither on Goodman's personality nor his ethics, but rather on those of the golf association, which has permitted itself to be drawn into the untenable position of disdaining a man who is admired and respected by everybody else.

DARLING OF GALLERY

He was the darling of the galleries down in Baltimore. He was and is exceedingly popular with the press boys and that's an accomplishment.

It's a triumph over tremendous odds. In contemplating their sport heroes, the press boys are prone to become irked at the slightest provocation. In fact, they are liable to irk right in your face.

So, on the available evidence, this is a man who ought to be received with enthusiasm by those who conduct amateur golf and, indeed, one of the reasons he isn't so received is hardly a credit to the supposed democracy of golf.

The other is silly. It is said on reasonably sound authority that the resentment against Goodman dates back to 1929 when it was felt that he had "ruined the gate at Pebble Beach" by beating Jones in the first round.

BORN POOR

It is thoughtless and inconsiderate actions like this, I suppose, that make life so hard to live.

In addition, of course, he had the questionable taste to be born poor and so had to get about to these tournaments as best he could, taking a room with bath when circumstances permitted and a room with bed, when circumstances didn't.

This didn't go well with striped umbrellas on the lawn and house parties at Newport and it was with some relief the officials learned that the young man planned to turn professional.

But the young man changed his mind and I don't think they've ever quite forgotten him, it being felt that a declaration of intentions was a tacit embrace of the professional faith.

Whereas, his professional tendencies are fundamentally less than those of the blue bloods who stand on the first tee and bicker for odds that nobody can lick.

SOUGHT GOLF TITLIST

The fact of the matter is that Harry Warner, of the motion picture industry, was down there in Baltimore, accompanied by his head man, apparently to rehire Jones for a series of shorts, but actually to sign the winner of the championship.

If this was a definite project, it was frustrated by the victory of the Canadian, C. Ross Somerville, it being understood that Somerville isn't interested, but, surprisingly, neither is Goodman.

He is one of nine children and life hasn't been very kind to him, but without hesitation he declared himself to friends 24 hours before the final match was played. He told them that, win or lose, he wouldn't consider a professional offer.

QUITE A FELLOW

So, he's quite a fellow, all told, with a direct, forthright view of life and the pleasing simplicity of one who has no "front" to maintain or background to conceal and, if the golf association can't quite approve of this, I fear the fault is not Goodman's.

Fundamentally, it's the old story of the innate lack of sympathy between the Park Avenue-Piping Rock set and somebody who comes from Omaha. But if you want fewer words, it's official snobbery.

YACHT LAURA G. LEADS IN POINTS

Southport, Ct., Sept. 19 (AP)—Although she has won neither race, Laura G., skippered by Ralph V. Bradley of the Illinois river fleet, led in points today as contestants for the international star class yacht championships prepared for their third race.

Laura G. finished third in both the first two races. Flapper, sailed by J. G. Miller of the Norfolk Yacht Club, won yesterday's race, but trailed far behind in points because of her poor showing Saturday.

Wings, skippered by Carl Pflug of Moriches Bay, winner of the initial race, came in fifth yesterday, dropping to second place in point score with 51.

Colleen, defending champion, placed seventh yesterday, but remained 20 points behind the leader. Mist, sailed by Ed Fink of Long Beach, Cal., placed second yesterday to take third place in points with 49.

E. BOSTON ELEVEN STRONG

15 LETTERMEN IN SQUAD OF 110

Among the Boston high school teams most likely to dethrone South Boston, the present District titleholder, East Boston's orange and black eleven appears to have as fine a chance as any.

Coach Fred L. O'Brien, a diamond luminary at Manhattan College before that institution began making a name for itself in football by way of Chick Meehan, has a squad of 110 candidates, including 15 letermen, at his beck and call.

Dick Gorman and Ken Stone are veteran guards. Both are hard to move and equally hard to stop.

MANY SEEK TACKLE POSTS

There will be no mad scramble for tackle berths on East Boston's first string team this season. These two posts have candidates enough to suit the most particular of coaches.

Signors Tony De Leo, Authon, Ciampa, and Roland Indrisano, brother of Johnny the boxer, are three regulars who must test their ability against that of Tom Hegner in a four-cornered fight for two awards.

Jerry Sacco will take care of one of the wing assignments as he did a year ago. The other extreme is at present untenanted, and the crush of candidates for this one unfilled post is terrific.

FRANK FORD PILOT

Frank Ford, who called the signals for the eleven last season, has this post staked off for another season. His chief alternate at the quarterback spot appears to be Leo Vitale.

Leo Corsetti and Leo Currie identical in their ability to play fullback as they are identical in given names, will likewise have little difficulty getting berths for the opening kickoff.

Additional ball carrying material will be found in George Sacco, the 12th of that family to make a name in East Boston athletics.

It looks very nice for East Boston this year, thank you.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

ANDY CALLAHAN secretly thinks that Lou Brouillard doesn't know the first thing about infighting and that it would be a cinch to lick him. And Johnny Buckley shares this opinion.

Brouillard doesn't believe there is a boxer weighing less than 150 pounds whom he cannot beat. And figures that fellows like Andy Callahan and Johnny Indrisano are just opportunities for him to fatten his bank roll. With Morris Lemoine saying "yes" to these statements.

Through the years welterweights have been the best drawing cards in Boston. iWtness the crowds that have turned out to see Jack Britton, Ted (Kid) Lewis, Mike Glover, Honey Mellody, oYung Klooy, Eddie Shevlin, Nate Siegal, Paul Doyle, Jackie Fields Lou Brouillard and the rest of the carefree 147 pounders.

I use the weight of 147 pounds with reservations. When Britton and Lewis were out front in the welterweight class, the weight for this boxing division was 142 pounds. Now most of the so-called lightweights enter the ring around 142 pounds even though the class weight is 135 pounds.

Sonny's Wild Plunge

GUS SONNENBERG continues to take desperate chances to win his mat bouts. At Philadelphia on last Friday night, the old Dynamiter received a severe shoulder injury when he missed a tackle in his bout with Dick Shikat and landed on a concrete floor.

There is so much power behind the Sonnenberg tackle that if Gus happens to miss his mark he is likely to go plunging through the ropes.

Other than the Dempsey-Firpo bout, I received my greatest sports thrill the night Sonny missed a tackle aimed at Strangler Lewis at the Arena and went flying between the second and third ropes to the concrete floor. Gus suffered a severe concussion of the brain from that toss.

Smith Y. M. H. A. Chief

SAM SMITH will once more be in charge of athletics at the Y. M. H. A. He tells me classes will get underway on September 26. Sam has done a great deal to increase interest in basketball, wrestling and other sports at the Y. M. H. A. He has had the full co-operation of Donald Stahl, president of the "Y," and Sam Rivkind, chairman of the Athletic Membership Committee.

Entries for 'Ace' Tourney to Close on Saturday

By BILL GRIMES

In order to allow sufficient time to compile the starting time list it is necessary to close the entries at midnight next Saturday. Due to the amazing list of entries, the Boston Evening American Hole-In-One tournament will, in all probability, require four or five days. This tournament will be an innovation, but as near as we have been able to figure out, it will take four minutes for each player to shoot five balls, have them measured and tabulated. At that rate only 16 contestants can play per hour, so starting times are absolutely essential.

The Boston Evening American tournament will be played on a specially constructed hole at Franklin Park. The hole is located in the area back of the 18th green. Under the supervision of Supt. Joe Howe, this sporty 128-yard hole was recently completed. The contestants will play from a slightly elevated tee to a blind green which is in a hollow. Although the shot ranges from a No. 6 iron to a niblick it is permissible to use any club.

GREEN IS IDEAL

Supt. Joe Howe has erected a 50x40 green, which is ideally constructed for the type of shots which will be played during the Hole-In-One tournament. The green is terraced and sufficiently punch-bowled to hold properly hit shots.

During the Boston Evening American Hole-In-One tournament the cup will be placed well back on the green. There will be a white line swung in a ten foot radius around the cup and only those balls which stop within this circle will be measured. Each entrant will be allowed to play five balls. There will be no practise shots played from the tee or to the green. No contestant will be allowed to play a shot until he has received the signal from the starter. As soon as contestants have played their quota of balls, they will be advised of their success or failure.

At the tee, there will be a large scoreboard upon which will be recorded the distance from the cup of every ball within the ten foot circle. In the event, there are no holes in one, the player whose ball has stopped nearest the cup will be declared the winner.

In regards to the team competitions, only the four balls closest the hole of any one combination will be scored. The store and club with the lowest totals will receive the Boston Evening American and Hon James M Curley cups.

It is not neccessary for members of teams to play at the same hour or day. All players who are entered for team competition are automatically in the individual contest and their scores will be tabulated on both sheets.

CORCORAN IN CHARGE

The Boston Evening American has recruited a splendid tournament personnel, which will operate upon the personal supervision of Fred J Corcoran manager of the Massachusetts Golf Association and state handicapper. Corcoran will be assisted by a corps of capable assistants, including his brother, John. There will be caddies to recover balls and return them. Too, there will be experienced markers, all of whom will realize the importance of their duties and the necessity for accuracy even to the fraction of an inch, and a number of capable tabulators.

One week from today, the starting times of the entire field will be published in the Boston Evening American. If you have already entered watch for your starting time. If you have not, do so before next Saturday at midnight. That is positively the dead line.

There is NO entry fee.

WEILAND IS DUE TO HURL TODAY

Detroit, Sept. 19—Only a last-ditch rally such as they staged in Cleveland last week can save the last-place Boston Red Sox from leaving Detroit tonight without having won a single game in this city all season.

The visitors faced the same disgrace in the third and final game of their last series with the Indians and came through with a win. They are hopeful of repeating the trick at the expense of the Tigers this p. m. even though Bob "Lefty" Weiland and not Ivy Paul Andrews, their only winning hurler and conqueror of the Peckmen, is to face Tommy Bridges on the mound.

Shut out in the first game of the local engagement, the McManusmen came back to put up a great fight in the second tilt, yesterday, but eventually they had to surrender 6 to 5.

The Tigers gained a two-run lead off Gordon McNaughton, sandlot product, in the first inning.

That lead lasted until the fourth when the Sox pounded Earle Whitehill's southpaw slants for five runs.

Big Dale Alexander finally snapped out of his batting slump. After going to bat 18 times without making a safety, Alex banged out three in four trips to the platter.

He trails Jimmy Foxx by a point or two as the Mackian slugger collected five out of nine in a double-header.

EAGLES HOLD FIRST HOME SCRIMMAGE

The field which was completed Saturday afternoon, will be used by the varsity team for the remainder of the season. The final panel in the fence enclosing the field was set up this morning.

McKenney gave the boys a three-day rest over the week-end to prepare for classes, which start today.

The Plausse-Reynolds battle for a tackle position will be settled in the next two weeks in the scrimmages at the Heights. Reynolds continues to hold on to the job mainly because of the fine work he did last year. Plausse is a steady plugger, who may get the position.

BUCKLEY AIDS KELIHER

Bill Kiliher, the coach of the yearlings, is going to continue his workouts, and will be assisted by Henry Buckley, star left end of the '31 eleven. Buckley was severely injured last year in college and is just recovering the use of his left arm. Keliher's outfit will be enlarged this afternoon by late comers.

Kelihar claims that his new squad is the largest in physique and number than he has ever had and holds out the prediction that this year will be best that Boston College freshmen have ever had.

SPINNER TO BE POLISHED

McKenney will try to perfect his spinner play during the next two weeks. This play last year was centered around Pete Chesnulevicn, halfback, and saw much use in the Holy Cross game.

Freitas and Curran, the two booters of the outfit, will unloose their boots this afternoon for the first time in almost a week. In Freitas, a right-footed kicker, and Bob Curran, a portsided booter, B. C. has two boys who can be used to fool the opposition this year on kick formations.

The newcomers who will see action in the scrimmages include Ben Moynahan, star halfback on the freshman eleven of two years ago; Dave Concannon, Frank Liddell, member of the Boston Hockey Club and all-around athlete; John Kirven, Henny Ohrenberger and Johnny Fortunato, all members of the frosh club last year.

Fish 'n Game

By WIN BROOKS

Here's good news for the never-say-die surfer. George Bishop came up from the Cape this morning with the good word that the cold spell has not driven the striped bass and bluefish out.

"Mr. Jones of the First National Bank, a novice at the game, caught three striped bass at Nauset yesterday," he reports. "One weighed 16 pounds, one 10½ and one 2½. Two were taken on an eel skin jig and one with a butterfish squid. Sidney Stewart caught a 10-pound bluefish on Monomy. The tail end of a norther is the best time in the world for the striped bass in the surf."

I half suspected that the expert Bishop had a hand in Mr. Jones' success, but he denied it.

"My only part was gaffing the fish. And the only strike I caught weighed four pounds," he added.

Fred Drosben of Hinsdale doesn't mind breaking his rod if the fish is worth it so he is mourning much over the shattered tip of his split bamboo bait caster . . . The fish that did it was an Ashmere lake pickerel that weighed better than four pounds and measured more than 30 inches. The line held when the rod broke and the fish was landed.

HEATH HEN GOING STRONG

It appears that the grief of ornithologists at the passing of "the last heath hen" from Marthas Vineyard—and from the world—was slightly premature . . . The report of its death, it seems, was slightly exaggerated . . . Dr. John B. May says it was seen recently.

Westfield is planning a field trial for foxhounds on Oct 13 . . . Behind the plan are Harry J. Bush, W. W. Clark, Fred F. Shepard and Frank Leahey, all of Westfield, James Raymond of Blandford, Harry Bowen of Fitchburg, Raymond Fowler of Southwick, and J. O. F. Young of Springfield.

Robert C. Knox, of Hartford, is after his fourth bull moose head at La Tuque, Quebec where the season opened Sept. 10 . . . Melted beeswax is the basis of several excellent boot waterproofing compounds that can be mixed at home . . . . Used with coconut butter or with cod-liver oil and neat's foot oil, it can't be beat . . . Apply while warm to warmed leather.

TEAL HIT 80 M. P. H.

The speed of bird flight has been a subject of argument where gunners gather since ever gunners gathered . . . But did you know a grouse can make nearly a mile a minute? . . . That a golden plover can hit 70 and a teal at least better than 80? Black ducks coming down wind to stool on a cold fall morning have always seemed mighty fast to me, a cheeso shot. Yet they fly something less than 50 miles an hour, according to authorities, and the fastest pace of geese is 55.

The town trout is dead in Shediac. Pat Cassidy jigged it 13 years ago. It was only three inches when he put it in the reservoir, the only fish. They drained the reservoir the other day and left it stranded, still the only fish in the reservoir. Can you guess its length? If you can, send in your guess because there is no contest and I don't know. I think the story is a fake.

James Noble, Julius Keer and Robert Sherman will rear 350 pheasant at Westfield this winter . . . Berkshire County League of Sportsmen's Clubs has withdrawn from the state council of sportsmen's clubs.

Dan Walden of Guilford, Ct., is going to Petersville, N. B., to judge the International Championship Bird Dog Field Trials Sept. 27 with Ozark Ripley.

RADIO THEME PROBLEM

Another Worry for Studio Showmen

By N. F. T.

Nothing is important in shaping radio policies unless listeners make it so. Even then it isn't always important to boss men of the broadcasting realm. Take for instance the theme song practice in program planning.

* * *

OLD ORDER PASSING?

Certainly that wouldn't seem to be anything over which too much fur should fly, yet the present day trend appears to be away from the idea. With a few exceptions where characters are unquestionably identified with a theme tune it just isn't being done.

* * *

Some of the most outstanding stars in the big studios have frequent requests from loudspeaker patrons to change from an old style "mike" signature, in favor of something different. Thus many celebrities find themselves worrying whether their pet bit still thrills as of old.

CONTRACT CLAUSES

It's a strange situation, this restriction whereby stars of one network are allowed to TALK on an opposition station but cannot SING. Surely the ruling isn't very complimentry to the conversational prowess of personalities affected. I'm wondering what might happen in the case of Will Rogers, he whose stock and trade is talk. Would they make him sing? There might be an attraction.

* * *

AIR ANNIVERSARY

When director Harry Horlick leads his radio music men over NBC network waves tonight (WBZ) from 8:30 to 9 o'clock, it will be the ninth birthday for those "A & P. Gypsies" on the air. This oldest of coast-to-coast programs is therefore especially arranged and as it gets started will be noted one-half hour earlier than usual. Extraordinary surprises are promised during the program.

Harry Horlick

* * *

Next on the new feature list and now being shaped, is a sort of female Ed Wynn character. Betty Healey, wife of the famous funster Ted, has the inside track it seems. Rehearsals are already in progress.

* * *

NETWORK NOTES

Kate Smith has cancelled all theater work, retiring to Lake Placid from whence her radio programs will be sent to New York and her nation-wide network over special lines. The big gal confides she needs relaxation and hints how recently there are pains almost for every pound — imagine! Tapping feet on the floor is a failing indulged by the "Three Keys" while working. A bit of carpet therefore goes under the piano. An announcer forgot to place the pad one night last week and the lads obliged by taking off their shoes. President Hoover speaks a week from today during cornerstone laying ceremonies for the new post-office building at Washington, D. C.

* * *

So the advertisers won their fight to let loose with how much their goods cost. It's a sign of something, but hardly increased interest on the part of air audiences.

* * *

HOPING FOR HOLDOUTS

Al Jolson and O. O. McIntyre are two people the "colyum" here hopes won't be radio holdouts much longer although chances of either or both ever marching mikeward are slim.

* * *

Tonight is an occasion of "Fu Manchu" mystery (WAAB) at 8 45.

* * *

Mayor Cermack of Chicago who took nearly 15 minutes one night last week to talk about beer on the air, is being flooded with fan mail praising the realistic manner in which he smacked his lips at intervals throughout.

On the Air

Lo! Introducing Amos D. Doodlededaddle, who has joined the world's immortals. He goes on record as being the only human who listened to a political talk on the radio.

Q.—How come, Mr. Doodledaddle?

A.—Well, sir, I'm sorry, sir, but you see, sir, it's my brother that's running for office, and the bully insisted that I listen and check up on his microphone technique.

Behold! An exclusive interview has been obtained with Felix 7 Aple, candidate for the office of chief clerk of reprobate court Mr Aple has already made 564,564 radio talks.

Q.—Why, Senor Aple?

Q.—Aw, aplesauce.

Attention! Lester Fizzle manufacturer of mikes, and alone in his sentiment toward political talks, has his say.

Q.—Will you have you say, Mr. Fizzle?

A.—Yeah, with toast. I'm in favor of political talks on the air. Since it started last wk. I've had 79 orders for new microphones. After every political talk the durn things go on the blink, blasted to pieces.

Q.—So what, Mr. Bluff?

A.—Never again will I allow politicians on my station. They've banged to pieces 18 desks, almost blew up Studio X by lighting a campaign cigar. Rivals for the same office have turned the foyer into a prize ring, and our mechanically cooled studios are ruined by a terrific influx of hot air. The wiring in the station is all burned up and so am I.

PUTS BUSINESS RECOVERY UP TO EMPLOYERS

THIS IS LIFE

HUMAN NATURE TOO COMPLEX TO BE GUIDED BY PLANNING GENIUS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

THERE HAS BEEN a slight revival of late in the flux of ideas about Planning. A year ago at this time hardly a person who erupted into speech but had a Plan. Not merely the professional literary kibitzers who offer advice from the side-lines, the Stuart Chases, et al, but all the industrialists, such as Mr. Gerard Swope of General Electric, who published a sumptuous volume so full of charts and statistics that it looked a good deal like a preliminary report on the Last Judgment. Those were the hopeful days. Your bootblack and the man who sold you neckties had Plans and your waitress drew diagrams on the table-cloth with a fork.

The winter shrivelled and blackened those tender shoots of the imagination. They could not stand the bitter actuality. But in the warm sun of summer they began to sprout again, probably encouraged by the interest which the two major candidates took in the idea. Between them they have pretty completely conjugated the verb "I plan."

* * *

Presidential Candidates Try It

Master Hoover recites: I plan; I have planned, I am planning, I did plan. Let us plan. Plan!

Master Roosevelt conjugates: I would have planned; you should have planned; I shall have planned; if you had planned; we will plan; and even goes into those complicated condition-contrary-to-fact verbs with protasis and apodosis, as follows: If you had not neglected to plan, we should not have had to do the planning for you after November.

And in England the British Association for the Advancement of Science comes out with the proposal that if it were all left to the engineer, the scientist, and the economist, everything would be all right. Prof. Miles Walker suggests that the government might endow an experimental self-supporting colony managed by the experts named above. The colony should consist of 100,000 persons who might be expected to maintain themselves and increase their wealth, when freed from the restraints and errors of modern civilization.

The argument is as follows. The three greatest evils in the world are: poverty in material possessions, poverty in outlook, and incompetence of rulers. So long as civilization is run on the principle of "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost" it must fail. Not merely 15 per cent of the inhabitants but every citizen should contribute to the wealth of society by making the things which men want and distributing them in the simplest and cheapset way.

Most countries, and especially the United States of America suffer from lack of special intelligence and expert knowledge in their rulers. (This is the British judgment upon a President who was elected purely and simply because he was not a politican but was an engineer and a business expert.) With engineers in control, an agreement might be made with every individual to supply food, clothes, housing, furniture, education and entertainment in return for his services. Young people would do all the hard work but no one would have to work long hours. (This last is a combination of Edward Bellamy's utopian book, "Looking Backward," and William James' interesting essay, "A Moral Equivalent for War." All the young people are to be drafted and put under military control to do the dirty work of the world.

Engineer's Training Not Enough

This scheme, it is estimated, would give everybody a living equivalent to that bought nowadays by $3000 a year. And so on.

The engineers certainly do not hate themselves. But I have spent some 20 years with embryo and adult engineers and I have yet to see any proof that expert knowledge of their profession qualifies them in any way for the larger capacities of statesmanship. And when all is said and done the problem remains not an economic one but a political one, the manipulation of human beings for the purposes of statesmanship. And a training in solving specific problems of engineering or pure science does not furnish even the basis for that training.

Dr. John T. Madden of the New York University School of Commerce phrases my doubt more exactly than I can. The trouble is, he says, that all this scientific planning must be carried out by ordinary human beings, not scientific geniuses. The use of rational engineering methods to untangle the industrial chaos is strictly limited by the "biological framework," the human nature which limits everybody.

"Three biological fundamentals which limit all human enterprises still knock vainly for full admission to economics.

"First is the fact that human leadership, like a stampede of range cattle, is never rational but always emotional.

"Second is the fundamental that the majority of human actions, as the Russian psychologist Pavlov has shown abundantly, are hopelessly and unchangeably 'conditioned' by past experiences. That is why prejudice is socially so much more powerful than reason, and why astute controllers of mankind still look so carefully to early conditioning in the schools" (Lenin and Mussolini, for example).

"Third is the chief biological fundamental of all, the fact that human beings are not even remotely alike.

Plato Learned Same Thing

"About one-third of any average population, for example, co[illegible] of competent individuals whose existence yields society [illegible] plus. About another third fit harmlessly enough into the [illegible] of their times and [illegible] about what they consume. They [illegible] neither notable assets nor notable liabilities on society's balance sheet. The remaining third are incontestably inferior. They are economic liabilities and mental vacuums. This may be a hard fact for humanitarians to face but it is unescapable. And until such biological commonplaces are faced unwaveringly by business theorists, what we are pleased to call planning is little more than play."

It is amusing that after a century of scientific progress we should have to be reminded of these things. Plato knew this when he ranked the population of his Republic in three permanent divisions, according to selective breeding and brain power. Edmund Burke, the great conservative, knew it when he ranked "prejudice" highest among the forces that rule men. Hamilton and Mad[illegible] knew it in their Federalist papers when they pointed out that all governments must be based on a wise manipulation of the instinct of self-interest. John Graham Sumner knew it in his essay, "The Forgotten Man," when he scorched with his satire the well meaning social theorists who are quite willing to spend the money accumulated by the self-supporting individualists to make life easy for those who either cannot or will not help themselves.

It is true that the Mussolini government has gone steadily ahead, and with apparent success, reducing the Italian people to a regimented uniformity unique in the modern world. But it is also true that the Soviet Government, which started out in the same way, has been progressively relaxing the control from above and restoring individual liberties in the economic as well as in the social field. The proof of every pudding lies in the eating.

YOUNG WILDCAT TOO MUCH FOR STORE BANDITS' GUNS

Battling bandits is just part of the day's work to Francis Capelli, 10, of 43 Elmdale st., Dorchester. When he entered an Adams st. store today, two gunmen were holding it up. "Stick 'em up kid, and be quiet," the bandits ordered. "Who do you guys think you are?" came back Francis, and when the pair tried to seize him, his answer was a wildcat attack with fists and feet that routed the gunmen as the store manager, [illegible] came from the cellar, joined in the free-for-all. The bandits fled in their car. Here's Francis, after his teacher allowed him to leave the classroom to pose. (Staff photo.)

Lynn Girls Given Drink and Robbed, Says Minister

Pay day gin-and-whiskey parties are thrown" by Lynn shoe factory employers for their girl workers but when the girls get drunk enough the money to pay for the party is extracted from their envelopes, Rev. Charles W. Squires charged in a sermon in Lynn.

The minister, before a First Presbyterian Church congregation, some of whom are connected with the shoe industry, congratulated Mayor J. Fred Manning and his investigators for exposing conditions of immorality in some factories.

"There are human rats," said the minister, "that work in the dark, remote from the eyes of man, and I fear there are some of them in some of the shoe factories of Lynn.

"Ordinary rats are honest, but but there are human rats that have no morals, such as the one who put his arm around a girl the first time she appeared as an employe, and said, 'You be good to me and I'll be good to you.' She refused his advances and lost her job.

Rev Mr Squires suggested formation of a committee of two men from each church in Lynn to investigate and correct conditions in Lynn factories.

GIRL, MEN HELD AS MORTGAGE PLOTTERS

Four Are Alleged to Have Defrauded Debtors by Means of Collection Agency

A suspended lawyer, his brother, a doctor, and a girl clerk were arraigned before Judge Hammond in Middlesex Superior court today on charges of conspiracy to defraud.

Robert A. Goodman, Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, attorney; his brother A Robert Goodman, a doctor with offices in Cambridge, and Miss Ada Varrell, Dorchester formed a collection agency which is alleged to have secured mortgages on personal property improperly, it is charged.

The Goodman brothers were held in $5000 and the girl in $3000 for trial.

COLLECTION AGENCY

According to Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe, who outlined the case for the State, the Goodman brothers ran a collection agency.

Collectors for this agency, Volpe charged, would go to persons who owed money, and one pretense of securing their signatures to a note acknowledging their debt, would have such persons sign a "duplicate" note, which was really a mortgage on all their personal property.

At a later date, Volpe said, the collectors would present their demands for immediate payment of the acknowledged debt under threat to seize the debtor's personal property.

CITES 25 CASES

Volpe said he had knowledge of about 25 cases wherein such deceit was practiced in Middlesex County and said the agency also operated in Suffolk County.

Goodman was found guilty on charges of gross misconduct in handling legal affairs in July, 1931, and suspended from practice for two years.

SPENT DOLE AS KIN HUNGERED

While Carmen Stormainolo, 31, of Chelsea st. East Boston was out spending the family's weekly dole of $14 received from the city, his wife and six children were sleeping on the floor and living on food given by neighbors, it was brought out today in East Boston court.

Stormainolo, who admitted he had not been home for more than a week told Judge Barnes he was "sorry" and would never do it again.

"You'll get plenty of time to be sorry," replied Judge Barnes. "Six months in the House of Correction."

He was in court on Mrs. Stormainolo's charge of non-support.

ONE ARREST IN GUEST HOLDUP

One alleged member of the gang of six men who forced their way into the apartment of Mrs. Sally Bollar, 30, and Miss Lillian Bouchie, 32, at 253 Dover st. to beat and rob a man guest of $150, is being held by East Dedham st. police on a charge of unarmed robbery.

Vincent Laporte, [illegible] of Sumner st., East Boston, was arrested early today in East Boston while driving his automobile, the registration numbers of which correspond to information [illegible] police by the victim, George Coronis of 13 [illegible]ton st., Cambridge.

Coronis was sitting in the living room of the apartment late last night, when three of the men entered. They announced their intention of holding up the two women and Coronis, and the latter darted for the door.

3 YOUTHS HELD IN AUTO THEFT

In an automobile which police said they admitted stealing from Morton st. Mattapan, two Mattapan youths and one from Walpole were arrested early today in Hamburg, N. Y.

They gave their names as John Dean, 19, of Sanford st. and Edwin Cook, 21, of Blue Hill ave., both Mattapan and Clifford J. Grant, 22 of Elm st. Walpole.

The three youths, in a car believed to be owned by A. Cutler of Columbia rd., Dorchester, were turned over to federal authorities at Buffalo for prosecution under the national motor vehicle theft act according to a message from New York police.

One set of plates covered the original set, while dealers' plates were in the car.

MUST CREATE JOBS, DECLARES OIL CHIEF

Teagle Tells Annual Conference Here What Will Make National Spending Power

The problem of finding employment for at least a large percentage of the 10,000,000 now without jobs and the surest steps toward restoration of normal economic conditions depends of the willingness of employers to distribute whatever work they have among the largest possible number.

This is the belief of Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who addressed the fourth annual conference on retail distribution which opened its two-day session in the University Club today.

TWO FACTORS

This annual conference is sponsored by the Boston Retail Trade Board in co-operation with the Harvard Business School, the Business College of Boston University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is being attended by representatives of retail boards and advertising agencies all over the country.

"National spending power," Mr. Teagle told the conference, "can be restored quickly only by the two factors in the situation, the employers, who today, have work to be done, and the men and women who are working for them.

NOW IS THE TIME

"The employers can do their part by working out ways and means of spreading available work over a larger number of workers, through some plan of staggering or dividing or rotating the work, some plan which fits the peculiarities of their particular type of enterprise.

"By all the signs, the time has arrived to take an important step on a national scale. There are people with needs and wants for which there is an ample supply of raw materials available, and plenty of producers willing and anxious to produce, and fabricate them for consumption; and plenty of workers eager to work.

"Business can go ahead at a reasonable and rapid rate," he continued, "if employers and employes get together on the share-the-work plan. With increased employment will come increased buying power. In increased buying power lies the solution," he said, "and neither federal nor state government can do anything but make the work, the money for which eventually comes out of the pocket of the taxpayer."

The conference was opened by P. A. O'Connell, president of the E. T. Slattery Co. and head of the Retail Dry Goods Association. Mr. O'Connell's welcoming address was charged with courage and optimism.

"We retailers," said Mr. O'Connell, "cannot wait for economic conditions to improve, because we are part of the economic machinery which must start things improving.

BOSTON MERCHANTS HELP

"As a step toward this end, we find retail merchants now placing orders for goods estimated throughout the country at one billion dollars. Boston merchants have done their share by placing orders for goods totalling over 90 million dollars which assures work for many and inspires a feeling of stability and security."

Three sessions of the conference will be held tomorrow also. Carl P. Dennett, chairman of the Banking and Industrial committee of the first Federal Reserve System area addressed the noonday session, as did Gilbert H. Montague, noted New York lawyer.

Denies Ever Having Received Money in Payment for Granting Loans

Even after David R. Siegal, Newtonville contractor, had been in poor debtor court in Newton, Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., continued to make Siegal loans, the banker testified today in the bank hearing.

McKnight, who has testified before, was summoned back as a witness by Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy in the latter's suit against McKnight, his wife and all other officers and directors of the bank to hold them personally responsible for its losses.

DENIES TAKING MONEY

The banker said he had known Siegal since 1927 but denied ever having received money personally from Siegal for making loans.

"As a banker, did you consider Siegal a fit person to be advanced nearly half a million dollars, either directly to him or to a corporation owned by him?" McKnight was asked by Bushnell.

"The question is too conclusive," the banker said.

Q.—Did you conceal from the board of directors the fact that Siegal was in the poor debtor court? A.—No sir.

Q.—Did you consider it sound banking to loan money to a man who had appeared in poor debtor court? A.—We relied on his representations. We made loans on securities.

LOAN ON SECURITIES

Q.—Do you deny that you formed the Dunbar Contracting Co. to hide the fact that you were loaning too much money to Siegal? A.—Yes, I do deny it.

Q.—You never inquired of your partner when you found that in your office this corporation was being formed? A.—I knew it was formed and that Eaton was doing the work, but I never inquired about it. We loaned on securities not on the maker of the note.

TIP IN DUBOIS CASE WINS $25

News tipsters collect again today and some of them in a big way.

The first award of $25, for a tip which assisted the Boston Evening American to score a clean beat over all other newspapers in the DuBois murder case—just one of the series of beats scored in that case—goes to a Charlestown man who wishes his name withheld.

Through having alert ears, this tipster was able to give the Evening American the first hint, which quickly developed into the suicide of Charles DuBois, six hours before his murdered wife's body was found.

The second major award, $10, is won by Frank Perry of 15 Prospect sq., Gloucester, for his exclusive tip regarding two men lost off the fishing schooner Gertrude Thebaud off Minot's Light.

A $5 award is made to a tipster from North Scituate who wishes his name withheld but through whom the Boston Evening American was able to locate the missing dog of Mrs. DuBois.

Awards of $1 are made to the following for their tips:

Mrs. L. Rudman of 38 Clark st., Medford, tip on a blood transfusion at Boston City Hospital; John H. Shaw of 11 Bel[illegible] ct., South Boston, tip on elderly motorman collapsing while operating a trolley near South Station; Carl Myerbeck of 30 Broadway ave., Quincy, pictures of a Boy Scout burned to death at a Cape Cod camp.

A. O. W. J. Hooper of 133 Win[illegible] pl[illegible], Revere, tip on Waltham bandit holdup; L. A. Murphy of 217 Orchard st., Watertown, tip on three-car crash; Mrs. Thomas Glennon, 8 Hayes ave., Revere, tip on man jumping to death from Point of Pines bridge; Sam Stone of 29 Lawrence ave., Roxbury, tip on capture of a thief by a policeman; Barnet Shaffer of 104 West Canton st., South End, tip on South Boston chain store robbery; Quentin Dunham of 8 Franklin st., Charlestown, tip on burglars at Charlestown health unit, and John Harrison of 6 Sycamore st., Belmont, tip on suicide at Waverley Oaks.

Lynn Couple Who Took Waif Win Adoption Battle

Salem, Sept. 19—"Buster" Bohanon doesn't really understand and doesn't care but he became "Buster" Nowleton today instead of "Buster" Lucey.

When a chap is only two and a half—like Philip Bohanon—a court battle over who shall adopt him doesn't matter.

The battle was in probate court today, the decision going against Mrs. Helen Lucey of Hawthorn st., Wakefield, a divorcee, and in favor of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Nowleton of Lynn, Rowley and Rockingham, N. H. Nowelton is a wealthy, retired shoe manufacturer.

CHILD BOARDED OUT

When Philip "Buster" Bohanon was born to Bessie Bohanon two and a half years ago the Nowletons, friends of the girl, took him for a time. Then he was boarded in a Richards family and went to Mrs. Lucey in September, 1930.

Last May the Nowletons were appointed guardians and took the child. Mrs. Lucey took the case to court.

Before Judge Harry R. Dow the divorcee testified she had an income of about $18 from her father and a sister and through taking washing. She learned to love the boy and could provide for him, she said.

WRITES TO MOTHER

Mrs. Lucey said "Buster's" mother, now Mrs. Bessie Shea, 23, of East Cottage st., Dorchester, an attractive blonde, never paid for his board.

Mrs. Lucey admitted having written to the mother threatening to give the boy to the State authorities if the board was not paid.

The Nowletons testified they also had learned to love the boy and they declared their means will enable them to afford him every opportunity in life.

When Buster's mother said she preferred that the Nowletons adopt her son Judge Dow said that settled it, because the law states the consent of the mother must be obtained to an adoption if she is living.

Flynn Ends Fight With Radio Speech

GROVER WHALEN MRS. HEARST

New York's milk fund for needy children sponsored by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, wife of the publisher, was increased considerably by a performance beginning at midnight of many stage celebrities in the Academy of Music at which Grover Whalen, who became famous as the city's official greeter, was master of ceremonies. Photo shows Mr. Whalen and Mrs. Hearst on the academy stage just before the program began.

CALLANS IN NEW BATTLE OVER CHILDREN

The battle of the Callans, which has been waged intermittently along one angle or another for many months, was resumed today when an order was served on Mrs. Mary H. Callan to appear and show cause why she is not in contempt of court.

In the order, obtained by Rev. John J. Callan, former rector of fashionable St. Andrew's in Wellesley, Mrs. Callan is accused of failing to observe the court order concerning her custody of the three Callan children.

When Mrs. Callan obtained a divorce in June, 1931, she was given custody of John D., Mary H. and Christina Callan. In March of this year the decree was modified and a provision inserted under which Callan was allowed to have the children every Sunday and to see them on Wednesdays and on their birthdays.

Only a few weeks ago Callan had the children at his home in Wellesley when Mrs. Callan sought to have him evicted from the property. He won out in this battle, however, obtaining a Supreme Court injunction.

TRAIN STONING VICTIM

Overheard

HEARD FROM THE POST DEBS: If you dress smartly in Boston, people think you are BAD.

We wouldn't dream of bringing a debutante from another city to a Boston party . . . they are too deadly dull.

We have taken a solemn VOW never to have our pictures taken again . . . and then they DID.

There is simply NOTHING doing . . . and then they went shopping for a new evening frock.

Give Up Agnosticism? Not a Chance, Says Darrow

Chicago, Sept. 19 (INS)—"If you ever hear me say I am going to give up my agnosticism, you can consider me a fit subject for the psychopathic hospital."

This was the remark of Clarence Darrow today on reports that an announcement of his joining the First Unitarian Society of Minneapolis has been construed as a renunciation of his long disbelief.

"In the first place," the noted criminal attorney declared, "the First Unitarian Society of Minneapolis is not a church organization. It has become affiliated with the First Humanist Society of New York, with the aim of projecting humanism, not Christianity.

"In the second place, I have not joined the organization. And never would join it under its present name."

Darrow explained he had been in correspondence with officers of the Minneapolis society who had asked him to join and deliver lectures on humanism throughout the country.

He declared that continuation of the Farm Board, or its equivalent, will bring "a farm peasantry, politically controlled and subjected to all the wrongs suffered by the toilers in the fields of eastern Europe."

Way Opened for Low Reichsbank Discount

Switzbasel, Sept. 19 (AP)—The board of directors of the Bank for International Settlements voted today to interpose no objection to a request by the German Reichsbank for suspension of the clause in the Hague plan by which the Reichsbank discount rate was fixed at 5 per cent. This opens the way for a lower rate.

The board renewed for three months the World Bank's share of the outstanding Reichsbank credit.

Books—And a Number of Things

—By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE—

Paul Cohen-Portheim, who wrote "England the Unknown Isle" and "Time Stood Still," comes to us now with a volume equally [illegible] and wise, called "The Discovery of Europe" (Dutton).

In it he surveys the Europe he had known and loved before the World War, and then analyzes various countries since the conflict. He feels that the present chaotic conditions and uncertainties are not the result of the war's changing a harmonious universe into one of bedlam; chaos had begun before the war and the war itself was more its result than its cause. He italicizes many of his statements and they leap out at you on many pages.

* * *

Deadly Enemies

He solemnly states that in August, 1914, Europe as an entity committed suicide. There was no longer any Europe; there were only two groups of deadly enemies. Though war had long been envisaged, few had believed in its imminence, and at least, as Mr. Lloyd George said many years after the war and when a certain amount of truth about it had become permissible, the nations had slithered into war."

"We have [illegible] writes [illegible] of European writers and critics of all nations flocking to New York and breaking into ecstatic paeans about the mechanical perfection of its aspects and life, while at the same time Europe became crowded with the writers and artists of America who found life there unbearable. While some Americans like Dreiser, Sinclair Lewis, Upton Sinclair, etc., denounced the inhuman brutality and standardized monotony of modern America all the Paul Morands of France, England and Germany acclaimed its poetic charm."

Europe is beginning to realize that it must rely on itself alone; and once it has completely realized that it will remember its unity, and that will be the moment of its rebirth.

Spain is the country of Europe which has been least affected by the 19th century. Yet it would be false to say that modernism has not penetrated into Spain, but it would be equally false to conclude that it had changed Spain. The Spaniard has remained as he always seems to have been—proud, independent, frugal, hospitable, polite.

Of England the author writes frankly, as he did in his "Unknown Isle." He neither wishes to please nor to displease the English, but to write of things as he sees them, and to praise or blame according to his convictions.

* * *

Dress Standardized

For many reasons a thorough going Americanization of England seems very improbable to him, though [illegible] Europe [illegible] some standardized [illegible] American [illegible] in masses and [illegible] craze [illegible] gammon or whatever is the latest —is religiously copied.

He believes that [illegible] which has been [illegible] things and [illegible] all over the world [illegible] with such [illegible] dimly feel that here at least is something new (the new [illegible] the forgotten old in new guise) which they could accept.

Europe, once so intimately linked, has as good as lost itself, but one day it will discover itself again. [illegible] tionalism is now fighting for its life and its position seems strong.

We get a lovely but fleeting picture of Austria, and particularly Vienna before the war. The wealthy Viennese led a happy life. They paraded [illegible] left their permanent mark. Yet our author has high praise for Protestant Switzerland, where he finds the people clean, decent, honest, sensible, reliable, etc.

With a poetic flourish he states with truth that there are countries and cities in Europe which are loved like human beings. Of such are Venice, Florence, Rome, Naples, Siena, Assisi, Perugia, Seville and Granada, Athens, Vienna and Paris. There is no reasonable explanation for such a choice, but it is a fact. Europe must discover itself again for itself and for the good of the whole world.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN -:- Feminine Interests in the Day's News -:- By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

'Tis Wonderful to See Life--- So Rejoice, Ye Women Depression Victims!

FOR EVERY WOMAN—but especially for every woman victim of depression,
Whose want of money, or work, or both,
Makes her worried and bitter, to the point of desperation—
(And small blame to her!)—
For every woman, who suffers so,
We recommend today a special treatment
Read, in the current Cosmopolitan,
The splendid story of a modern miracle -
The story of Earl Musselman, born blind
And at twenty-two receiving from scientific surgery
The magic gift of sight
Read what it has meant to him
In beauty and wonder and power—
Read and realize what the world holds for you,
Even if you are poor and unemployed.
So long as you still can SEE!
Shut your eyes for a moment—
Think of your life
If you never could open them again
Think of being BLIND
And then ask yourself if you're not lucky—yes, LUCKY -
Merely to be penniless and job[illegible]
Earl Musselman's lovely, ingenious story
Of the rapture of recovered sight
Is a useful reminder of one joy of life
Which so many simply, take for granted -
They have eyes and they see not!
Not so Earl Musselman -
See the world for a moment as he first saw it
"Color," he exulted, "is a miracle of vision
Everyone seemed beautiful to me
Flowers seemed so beautiful
I wanted to live in a garden forever."
Then comes the gentle reminder
Of something which he cannot yet "see —
"The fact that so many of you
Are oblivious of all the beauty around you—
Colors, flowers, trees, fields, rivers
And all the other glories of Nature
No wonder Earl Musselman concludes
"I cannot help thinking that there is another kind of blindness
Almost as bad as that of the eyes —
A blindness of the soul that keeps sighted people
From really seeing and enjoying the beauties of Nature
And these beauties beckon even to New York vision
An ocean playing the color scale
From palest turquoise to deepest sapphire,
With grace notes of jade green,
A sky painted with orange-scarlet and flamingo-rose
Of September dawn and sunsets,
A moon like a great golden fruit,
And, in a little while, across the Hudson
Autumn's own forest fires
Of frost-touched crimson and tawny foliage—
All free for the looking -
"Heaven itself is given away,' wrote a wise poet
Yes it's a depressed world—
And it has reason to be
But it's still a beautiful world,
If you have eyes—and use them!

Drop the Older Men, Advises Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Please lend me a helping hand. I would like to have the friendship of some boys about my own age, but somehow I seem only to attract the attention of older men—men between the ages of 30 years to 60, and most of these are married. They make love to me, but I don't encourage their attentions or accept their invitations. I'm just afraid of that type. People think I am about 15 yyears old. I am really 17 years old, and would like a pal of my own age. MAY

Dear May: What do you do to these married men from 30 to 60 that drives them to despair? For, as you see, I haven't published all your letter. Perhaps boys of your own age, seeing the havoc you cause among the oldsters, that you like them old Just confide in some nice boy of your own age that you really are not the vamp you seem; that you enjoy being with people of your own age; and if he has a heart, he'll take the hint and invite you out. Pass up the admirers old enough to be your father.

He Prefers the Society of Boys

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I'm 18 and he is 21. We've been going together for over six months. He says he cares more for me than any other girl, but he'd rather be with boys than with me. I've asked him to go for walks, but he always says he doesn't want to go. Do you call that being a real sweetheart? He has no job and no money to spend, but I don't care. Money isn't everything. My mother is always imagining things such as he doesn't care for me, he goes with other girls and worse things Don't you think we'd get along better if my mother didn't tell me these things? ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious I'm afraid you've shown too plainly, my dear girl that you're willing, glad even, to put up with any kind of treatment that the young man likes to hand out, and that's never good policy Men are often indifferent to girls and prefer the society of other men, till they meet some girl who fairly sweeps them off their feet. In the meantime, don't get lines in your face sitting round moping over a boy who declines even to take a walk with you. Go out and walk with someone else. Your mother, very likely, sees things clearly, as she's on the spot and has your welfare at heart.

"Necked" Rival, Before Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I would very much appreciate your advice and opinion in my case. I have been going with a girl for some months. She is an ideal girl and very lovable, but she has one weakness—that of ignoring me in the presence of other boys. She claims that she doesn't want to appear to be "stuck up." On one occasion when the Sunday school gave a straw ride, she was actually necking another boy in my presence. A quarrel ensued which made her angry. Now she tells me that there is but one thing to do if I'm not satisfied. I love her very much. R. M

Dear R. M.: When a girl indulges in "necking" before a patient suitor and then tells him there's but one thing to do if he's not satisfied, it's high time to give her a wholesome dose of independence. "Blessed are the meek" was not written for young men who go a-courting.

LemonGood to Pep Up Foods

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

BETTY, who helps me at home, has a tacit agreement with me that I'll always find at least one lemon in the pantry. So many times it needs just a dash of lemon juice to pep up some cotton-woolly fish dish or to bring out the flavor in sauces or whatnots

Ever make a meat loaf flavored with lemon juice? You won't taste it in the finished product but you will find the loaf somehow more tender and appetizing than the ordinary kind. Here's the key to the combination

Meat Loaf

(Serves 6-8)

2 lbs. ground beef
¾ cup sweet milk
1 cup bread crumbs (or cornflakes)
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tbsps. melted butter
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 egg.

Combine ingredients and shape into loaf. Place in baking pan, add 1 cup water and bake in a medium oven from ¾ to 1 hour.

And some other lemon specials for your card file

Lemon White Sauce

(Serves 6)

2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
½ cup water from vegetables
1 to 2 tbsps. lemon juice
½ cup evaporated milk

Melt butter, blend with flour and salt. Add milk and vegetable water. Cook till smooth and creamy, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice Serve over two cups hot cooked vegetables.

Tartare Sauce

(Serves 6-8)

1 cup mayonnaise
½ tsp. onion juice, or
1 tbsp. chopped chives
2 tbsps. chopped sweet pickles or green relish
1 tsp. chopped parsley
Lemon juice

Combine ingredients and thin to desired consistency with lemon juice

Variations: Chopped celery Capers. Chopped pimolas Chili sauce. Worcestershire sauce Tabasco. The flavor of onion is essential to all tartare sauce

Spinach With Lemon

Add lemon juice to cooked spinach, allowing 1 tbsp. of lemon juice to each cup cooked vegetable. Melted butter may also be added. Or spinach may be served with lemon garnishes, allowing each person to use lemon juice as desired

Dull Finish for Complexion Is Best

NEVER SHOULD the complexion show up a heavy powdery appearance Instead there should be the light dull finish, powder perfectly distributed, surplus removed with a camel's hair complexion brush. Neck and ears are entitled to their share Ears are prettier when the lobes are rouged The shade of the powder should be a little lighter than the skin

Eye Shadows

EYE SHADOWS belong to the exotic type, the kind of a girl who can get away with extreme styles, who has a bit of the scenic about her. Quiet little mouses, demure and prim, are out of character when they go in for an excessive amount of complexion batik. Simplicity is their long suit in complexion decorations and dress. Very attractive they are too when they keep their beautifying ambitions to simple, natural effects

Steam the Face

WHEN BLACKHEADS are deeply embedded, soaping and scrubbing won't budge them Best then to steam the face by applying heavy towels that have been wrung out of hot water, drying gently, pressing out each stubborn plug with a comedone extractor, a small instrument that can be purchased at the drug store. This beauty aid has an open space like an old-fashioned watch key and, as pressure is evenly divided there is no possibility of abrasions.

To Remove Hair

DEPILATORIES can be used to remove fuzzes from the legs. Won't do to have them when hosiery is of sheer cobweb substance; they show through.

Good Manners for Use at the Table

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1—Should radishes and celery be taken in the fingers like olives?

2—While eating lettuce and tomatoes, should merely a fork be used, or is a knife and fork allowed?

3—If bread and butter may be eaten with the dessert, should they remain on the table or be removed and brought back again later? BELLE.

1—Yes. If we serve ourselves to a radish or a piece of celery or an olive, we take it in our fingers from the serving plate and place it on our bread and butter plate. We take the olive in our fingers and "nibble" it We do not take the olive, put it in our mouth and suck it. When we are finished "nibbling" it, we put the pit on the bread and butter plate.

3—Under the very unusual circumstance that bread and butter would be eaten with the de[illegible] it would, I should think, be more convenient to have the bread and butter plate remain on the table, not removed and later returned

Fish Bones

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Should fish bones be removed from the mouth while eating, with the fingers or with your napkin? If with the napkin, should the bone be left in the napkin or placed on the plate? Z.

The fish bone should be removed with the fingers—that is, between the thumbs and the first finger, or the thumb and second finger. And as unobtrusively as possible, of course.

Little Sleep Brings on Illness

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MANY MINOR ailments can be traced to a lack of sleep. Yet the average person does not give much thought to the subject of sleep. Though he knows he feels better after a good night's rest, he may neglect this simple measure of health. The temptation to stay up late makes him forget his resolution to go to bed early

Dr. Copeland

A well nourished and healthy individual requires six to eight hours of sleep. A man may live for days without water, and a much longer time without food, but if he is deprived of sleep he usually goes out of his mind after the fifth or sixth day.

Sleep is essential to the proper growth and recuperation of the body. Fatigue breaks down the tissues and during sleep the body attempts to restore the cells and the energy that have been lost in the waking hours.

There are many who realize the importance of sleep but find it difficult to sleep. Insomnia wakefulness, is a dreaded and often difficult trouble to overcome. Fear, worry, mental and severe emotional strain, are usually the underlying causes of thousands of cases of insomnia

Sound sleep is restful sleep. It is usually a habit acquired in early life. The infant who has been taught to sleep at regular hours, grows and develops more quickly than the child who has scanty and broken sleep. The child taught to sleep properly is given a heritage he will carry with him throughout life

Let me warn you against the use of patent medicines and drugs taken to secure sleep. If you have been having difficulty in falling asleep and have not recently consulted your physician, do so now. There may be some constitutional defect that is causing this disturbance. In certain cases medicines are beneficial, but they should be given only on the advice of a physician

Do not be misled by the various stories of great men who have managed to survive on four or five hours of sleep. The necessary number of hours of sleep is determined by the age, sex, occupation and health of the individual Though no definite rule can be made, it is safe to say that six to eight hours of sleep are necessary for the average adult. Personally, I must have eight hours in order to do my best work

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo writes "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

Daily True Story

Freedom of the Knees

"WATCH 'EM in the subways, going through the tunnels," Brandt declared with his best air of sophistication. You can tell."

Brandt had been in from Kennebec for three full years. He KNEW he knew his New York

"Tell what, Jim?" asked George Carey.

"All about a girl," said Brandt. "You've seen 'em when they come in with one of those fluttery chiffons. There's skirts all over the atmosphere as soon as the wind begins to blow down the aisle. That kind of girl's either dumb or advertising. She either doesn't know how to conduct herself in public or she's trying to tell the world she wears two dollar stockings, in spite of the depression"

"Ha, the knee inspector," taunted Joe Bliss

"Laugh, chump," countered Brandt, "you'll learn after you've been in the Big Town awhile. You take the girl who comes in and tucks her skirts tightly under her, so that she shows every line of her legs—she doesn't know much more than the let-'em-fly kind."

PROPER TECHNIQUE

"Just what," asked Carey, "is the exactly proper technique for a girl to follow with her skirts in the subway to meet with your approval?"

"Well," Brandt began, "I'll tell you. I saw a girl today that seems to me to come just about up to perfection. She was in a corner seat when I got on at Grand Central, you know, and ride to Times Square, so's to get a seat when we start back."

"Yeah," cut in Bliss, "and you knew just where to stand so's to be first into the car when the doors open up. You've told us all about that in your primer lesson on how to get by in New York. Go on."

Brandt gave him a twenty-pound look, but went on

"Well," said Brandt, "she had on good-looking shoes, and really sheer hose, and a skirt made out of some sort of awfully light stuff. It looked like it would blow all over the place. She read a book and the train started. Right after Grand Central the train hits the tunnel and the wind came through in a gale. She just reached out, tucked a bit of that skirt under her right knee, where it crossed her left, and went on reading. And that skirt stayed there, yes sir, stayed there all the way through the tunnel I tell you, that girl had technique. I'll bet she was born in New York."

* * *

For a week Brandt had made that same train, and on four of the six days he's managed to get a seat across the aisle from The Girl. And on four rides through the tunnel he'd failed to see a single flash of knees as the tunnel tests went on. In his mind came a great determination. He was going to get to know the girl

During the second week he had his big opportunity, when, at Queens Plaza the youth in the gray suit and cap grabbed the girl's pocketbook from her lap, as the last of the outgoing passengers were by the door, and just before the rush of incoming ones

Because he'd been watching her he saw the move, was on his feet and was the only one in the car who got out after the purse crowd blocked off pursuit. He followed the gray clad youth, caught him within a few feet of the steps leading down from the elevated structure, and took him by the collar. Jim Brandt was five feet eleven and had played football. The gray clad youth was five feet two and had played pool. Jim retrieved the pocketbook

WAD OF BILLS

Inside was a neatly folded wad of bills—$32 in all. There was a card, marked identification, which read "Rosemary Barrett" and an address in Jackson Heights. He was at that address, by means of a cab, when she appeared. He handed her the pocketbook. He told her how it had been recovered. Naturally their acquaintance started then.

In a cab, bound homeward after a theater, a month or so later on Jim Brandt told her what had been on his mind

"And one of the reasons I'm so wild about you," he said, after nearly five minutes spent in making his earnest plea, "is that you're such a typical New Yorker."

"But," she told him—and her laugh was one of those laughs that are made by eyes and nose and lips—"I'm no such thing. I'm just here for a visit with my aunt. I'm from Old Colony Falls, and it isn't even on the railroad."

Of course, when they moved into their own apartment, and Carey and Bliss came over sometimes for dinner, neither Jim Brandt nor his wife ever talked about Old Colony Falls.

Household Hints

TO CLEAN graniteware when mixtures have been burned on it, half fill with cold water, adding washing soda or soap powder. Heat gradually to the boiling point Then empty and the dish can be easily washed. Silverware can also be cleansed in this way, as it requires no scouring.

AFTER WASHING lettuce or other salad green, keep them crisp by putting them in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator

Paris Stylists See Gray as 1933 Color

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Sept. 19—Gray is prophesied as one of the outstanding color fashions for 1933. In Paris fashion shows it appears in many variations—putty, dove's breast, asbestos, pumice-stone, slate, oxford—all from palest, almost-white tint, to a deep furry gray in heavy woolens which looks, at a distance, almost black.

One of the interesting phases of this new color range is in its combinations with other colors Light gray with chocolate brown, dark gray with yellow and orange, pumice gray with dark and light reds, asbestos gray with navy blue, putty gray with black —these are some of the new color alliances that are being formed in Paris fashion circles just now. Schiaperelli announces pumice-gray as one of her favorite winter colors; Chantal uses gray for heavy topcoats; Augustabernard makes some of her best looking wool dresses of dark gray crepe, fabrics Many other dressmakers use gray, combining it with pastels and with dark rich flower colors.

Knitted fabrics in two of the darker variations of gray were used by Maggy-Rouff to make this coat-dress and topcoat, which may be worn together. Both are of knitted fabric—the coat in coarser weave than the dress, but both of stout quality which will stand the rigors of travel and general knockabout wear.

The dress has raglan shoulders—the coat, classic sleeves and shoulder lines. Both are fastened at the front in a side-V fastening, marked with Maggy-Rouff initials. Both make clever use of a cravat scarf in brilliant shades of orange and yellow.

"I'VE traveled the world around," muses the Epicure, "and have tasted foods in many lands. One lesson I have learned. If one constantly seeks perfection, ultimately it is attained...as witness the marvelous cuisine at The WARWICK in New York." Add to that the spacious comfort...the luxurious accommodations...the perfect service...the fashionable, congenial atmosphere...and you will begin to understand the appeal of The WARWICK. Even a short stay will be memorable.

'Mary Faith'

The Story of a Heroine Who Met Old Problems in a New Way

—By BEATRICE BURTON—

In her mind she went through the dingy Wilton st. flat, putting up new white curtains in the sitting room, setting the dining room table with a set of Indian Tree china, tacking down shiny new blue-and-white linoleum on the kitchen floor. Her fingers fairly itched to get at that flat and make it a brighter place for Kim.

He was turning to her now and Dr. Pomeroy was beaming at them both as he closed his prayer book.

Claire and Jack Maldon came up to them from the shadows where they had been standing.

Claire's bright blue eyes were on Kim's face and she was smiling broadly at him. She laid one of her white-gloved hands on his shoulder.

"Well, Sandy," she asked him, "how do you feel now that it's all over?"

Kim laughed. "I feel just like a married man," he said. "That service certainly does tie you up for life, doesn't it?—'Til Death us do part.' That's quite a line, isn't it?"

Claire turned her eyes to Mary Faith. "Now that you're safely married, could I please have my wedding ring?" she asked. "They say it's bad luck to take off your wedding ring, and this is the first time I've had mine off since Jack put it on last October. I keep it on even when I wash dishes."

Honeymoon Tips

She talked constantly. She talked all the way into the registry, where Mary Faith and Kim wrote their names in a book filled with the names of other brides and grooms and all the way out of the shadowy old church into the sunlight.

"Sandy," she said to Kim as they stood in the street beside Kim's shabby little roadster, "We brought you and Mary Faith a wedding present and put it in the back of your car. It's a package of books—all the new novels that looked good to us. We knew they'd be life-savers for you down in that dead little town where you're going."

She had a light, pretty voice that was like a very simple piece of music.

"You don't believe what I'm telling you," it rippled on, "but in a week or so you two will be so bored with each other that you'll yawn every three minutes by the clock. You'll wish you'd never seen each other. . . . Jack and I scrapped all the time we were on our honeymoon, didn't we, Jack?"

"Well, we did whether he admits it or not," said Claire. "We fought like two strange bull-dogs . . . You see, we thought we wanted to be all by ourselves, just the way you do. So we went 'way up into the North Woods, miles from everywhere. And four days after we got there it began to rain. It just poured! And we didn't have a thing to read or even a deck of cards! It was ghastly! Next time I get married I'm going to Atlantic City or Palm Beach or some other crowded spot for my honeymoon, and no fooling!"

Her World Far Away

"When you get lonesome come back to town and call up the Maldons!" Her voice floated after them through the clear bright air. "Don't forget, Sandy!"

* * *

The gray-blue shadows of late afternoon lay across the snow when Mary Faith and Kim drove into the main street of Garrettsville—"the main drag," as Kim called it.

It was a long narrow street lined with little shops—a candy store called The Sugar Bowl, a White Front Meat Market, a Five-and-Ten filled with tinsel and toys, a jewelry store that reminded Mary Faith that she had no wedding ring.

Kim parked the car at the little telegraph office and they sent off two day letters—one to his mother and one to Mrs. Puckett.

"Now, then, we've done our duty," Kim said when they came out into the snow and sunshine once more, "and we can forget the rest of the world for two solid weeks, Mrs. Farrell."

The world that Mary Faith had always known already seemed very far away. Was it only last night that she had sat talking to Mrs. Puckett in the house on River st.? Only this morning that she had said goodbye to Mark Nesbit in her old office in the Nesbit Building? It seemed ages ago . . .

Mary Is Enchanted

Snow lay deep on its porches and along the tops of its diamond paned windows. A silver fringe of icicles hung from its low-pitched roof and on either side of it stood a tall fir tree.

"It isn't a real house at all. It's a picture on an old-fashioned Christmas card, Kim, and I know it!" Mary Faith declared as they drove up the hill and into the drifts of the backyard.

He always seemed embarrassed when Mary Faith made extravagant statements or quoted poetry to him.

He set the suitcases and the Maldons' books on the back porch and unlocked the door.

The kitchen was filled with a faint spicy smell as if gingerbread had often been baked in it, and the low red sun shining in through the west windows made it seem very bright and cozy. There were rag rugs on the floor and a big cushioned rocker stood near the stove.

"Did you ever see such a lovely kitchen in all your life?" She turned wide starry eyes to Kim. "And look at the wall paper in the dining room! All little Chinese pagodas and boats! Why, this house is just a house of a dream, isn't it?"

"Is it?" Kim asked.

He had no eyes for the little house. He had come up beside her and his arms were around her holding her so close that she seemed to feel the quick heavy drumming of his heart in her own heart. She sighed, lifting her face to him.

Gloriously Happy

"Kim," she said with a throbbing note in her voice, "Kim, I'm never happy unless I am with you."

* * *

For two weeks both of them were gloriously happy with a happiness that Mary Faith had never dreamed of. The days were gone before they knew it, and yet all of them were pretty much alike.

VALENTINE

A Gripping Novel of Love's Disillusion

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

"And I really should know what sort of things I'll be needing in Minnesota, because Millie is determined to buy me more, and I may as well get the right things. Millie says I'll need at least four formals, but I don't think so, do you?"

"The ladies of our social set in Minnesota," Joe wrote back, "wear mother hubbards and sunbonnets!"

And a little later: "Seriously, Val, we aren't too all-fired dressy out here—that is, in our crowd. Nobody terribly rich, you know, and most of the gang spend what little extra they have for shows and that sort of thing."

"You'll knock us all dead. Nobody wears anything very grand. Sure you want to give up the yachts and swell cars and all that your mother seems to want to give you for a two-room apartment and a hum-drum existence here with me?"

She wrote back: "Don't be silly. Do you think I care for the yachts and cars and all that? Didn't I tell you I love you? Isn't that enough?"

But she sat looking at the letter after it was finished.

It was all true, every word. These things that Millie could give were nothing. But it wouldn't do any harm to stay a little bit longer. As Millie said, there was no rush about getting married.

VAL SENSES TRUTH

"The devil with all that," Vincent said. "Now you're down here, stay awhile. If you're going to be a poor architect's wife and settle down in the middle west, you want to get some fun first. See that she has a good time, Millicent!"

Millie didn't have to try. It just happened. Every day was a party to Val, accustomed to the stern eye of Aunt Julia and a life of working, eating, sleeping and not much else.

Here she was constantly admired and though those who admired her didn't matter particularly, it showed her that she really had possibilities. At home Joe was the only one who ever really admired her.

She picked up a jargon of horse shows, races, dog shows. Had her first lessons in golf. Learned to drive Millie's speedy roadster, the first big car she had ever had in her hands. And adored the yachting parties.

These all too often demoralized into drinking parties, with most of the guests carousing in the saloon or flat on their backs in their bunks. But that just gave her the deck to herself. She could stand, wind whipping her hair, tingling her cheeks, hands thrust deep into her pockets, beside Mr. MacSweeney, the skipper of the Sea Horse, and listen to his stories of the old days when he sailed a real ship on a real sea.

"Not that the Pacific isn't a real sea, but we seldom get out into it. We cling to the coast here and stick with the crowd . . . ah, well!"

He sighed, and for a moment Val felt sad, too. Something about the way he said it . . . like Jim . . . Jim who once loved Millie . . . and was gone.

Now looking back she could see what she didn't see before—the kind of life Millie must have led, when she was a little girl. The strangers they met at the park. The men who bought dinners, sent flowers, presents . . .

AUNT URGES RETURN

Sometimes her eyes would rest on Millie, speculatively, worriedly, and then Millie would fidget and sometimes make an excuse to leave the room.

Aunt Julia's letters grew insistent. Val MUST come home.

"I can't help it, I can't stand those women," she told Millie when Millie scolded her for going to her room when one of the "big parties" was in progress. "They're common!"

Millie cried. "They're not my friends," she said, through tears. "They're Vincent's, and I don't like them any better than you do. I'm going to get rid of them. I'll tell him. He never considers MY feelings. What am I here? Nothing. I'll show him. I'll put a stop to it!"

That night she thought that Millie and Vincent quarreled, for all the next day he was gruff and Millie was tearful.

"I just must go," Val said.

"Of course . . . If you must, you must," Millie said.

HOME AGAIN

But she had planned for days ahead . . . picnics, beach suppers, yachting parties, with the very women about whom she had complained.

Val grew more and more nervous. "I must go, I really must!"

"Oh, nonsense!" Vincent said.

Toward the last Val was almost hysterical, so nervous and worried, so anxious to get away.

But when she was in the train at last, her new luggage heaped around her she wondered why she had rushed.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By Louis Sobol

Prattle and Tattle!

I[illegible] secret to their friends that Marion Nixon, the [illegible] and her husband, Ed Hillman, have drifted, but when I announced it three months ago over the air, Hillman called up all the way from the Coast threatening to cut my journalistic throat. The rift between Vivian Duncan and Nils Asther is wider than the Colorado Canyon, as a result of which Vivian is coming East to revive her sister act with Rosetta. Bert Wheeler flew in from the Coast Wednesday night and two hours after he arrived was purring and cooing openly with the vivacious Vera Marsh. Tommy Guinan is back in town, too, absolutely heartfree for the first time in years, but Tommy Manville, Jr., the asbestos heir, having aired Marion Carewe, is now courting a stately and pulchritudinous blonde, and another blonde beauty of Broadway, Virginia Hawkins, is nite-spotting with Irving Geller, the young shoe magnate. And that's the way it goes, ladies and gents; people are breaking up and people are making up, and it's all very gay. Bert Taylor, gay society blade, is wooing sundry gals of the town, his tongue in cheek and his fingers crossed, but out on the Coast, Lupe Velez has resumed her romance with Winnie Sheehan and it's very serious. Texas Rayne, Guinan redheaded beauty, having received her annulment, has slipped off quietly and married George Gowans, the Lombardo musician, and Helen Morgan, in an indigo mood because Arthur Loew has slipped off for an airplane and boat trip around the world, is finding some measure of consolation in the pair of diamond clips gifted her Tuesday night by the Cuban sugar millionaire, George Sanchez—with the connivance of his good-looking wife. Appealing to me is the sign in an Eleventh Ave. undertaker's window reading, "Closed on Account of Death."

The newspaper boys in Rome are atwitter over the case of an enterprising lad named Golaneo who was fired because he handed in a yarn that Mussolini was planning to have his marriage annulled. The offspring of Hugh E. Murray, 2nd, will be christened Sunday by Cardinal Hayes himself at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The winsome Dorothy Maxine, show gal, and Dave Feldman, vaudevillian, have called all romantic bets off, and over in Pittsburgh one of the meanies in writing an account of the very social wedding of Anita Shields and Captain Alastair MacLean, called attention to the fact that Peter Shields, the papa, was once a bricklayer. Frank Mitchell, of Mitchell and Durant, and Sid Slate, of the Slate trio, will be pappies shortly. Tamara Draisen, the Russian warbler, and Marty Tafel will parade to the altar soon in a realty circles they whisper that one of the famous Manhattan skyscrapers is to be taken for its indebtedness by one of the largest women's organizations in the city. Geofrey Cohen is the youngster that joined the menage of the Julius (Journal of Commerce) Cohens the other ayem, which reminds me that Cohen insists now that the depression is over, two of his best friends are terribly sorry they committed suicide. Russ Columbo fainted Monday nite. The Reginald Marshes have inflicted the name of Caleb on their new bassinet tenant. That Chinese beauty who created a furore at the opening of "Clear the Wires" at the Times Square Theater, Wednesday night, is the wife of Henry Lachman, the movie director.

Johnny Weismuller and Bobbe Arnst may be doing Vallee-Webb. The two gents in a close huddle in a well-known cafe in the 50s Tuesday night were Mayor Cermak, of Chicago, and Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City. June Hara, the lass who's sculpting the bust of Walter Chrysler, will elope shortly with Bill McKee, son of the president of Chase Securities, and the Sydney Smith-Lili Damita romance is definitely on ice. Smith spent most of his time at the private party at the Waldorf, Tuesday night, gazing into the soft eyes of a voluptuous brunette. The cutest romance on Broadway is being carried on by mail between Barbara Fried, aged eight, dtr. of Arthur Fried, song writer ("It Was So Beautiful"), and Sonny Brown, aged 11, son of Nacio Herb Brown, song writer, too, with the kids having set the date, etc., and the shortest sentence I know containing every letter of the alphabet is "Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs." The Josephine Larkin (ex-Follies beaut)-Dick Gardner flame is burning high again and that marriage license will probably be used after all. Jessie Smith, New England beauty, and James Nathaniel Murphy have had the Tie That Binds severed. Vilma Ebson, the dancing lass of "Flying Colors," and Nelson Hesse are Twosoming.

Something that has set me wondering is the information that A. Van Buren, the cameraman who shot Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," is aboard the plane bearing the Hutchinson family and the further information that the whole expedition, misadventures and all, will be incorporated into a film. Stephen Endicott, who authored "Mayor Harding of New York," is now completing his new novel, tagged "H. H. H." purporting to be a sensational expose of Eddie Windsor, Prince of Wales. A bitter feud is raging between Sergie Eisenstein, the Russian director who's just turned out 130,000 feet of film on Mexican peonage, and Upton Sinclair, who backed him, with Sinclair refusing to let the director cut the film down. As ballyhoo for the forthcoming Manhattan showing of Doug Fairbanks in "Robinson Crusoe" the exploiting boys are stationing a bell hoy in the lobby of every leading hotel in town who will shout at 15-minute intervals "Mr. Robinson Crusoe. Paging Mr. Robinson Crusoe." Ain't dat sumpin'?

What amuses me about Canada's imaginary grievances against us is that American tourists spent $240,000,000 in Canada last year. Jimmy Durante will go into "Humpty Dumpty," but for 10 weeks only, and Rowena Pond, one of the models at Milgrim's, is a dead ringer for Gloria Swanson and is taking it seriously. Harry Richman and Dave Rubinoff will appear in a joint concert at Carnegie Hall in the fall and Claire Luce (Mrs. Cliff Smith) in spite of her millions, is reading plays, planning to turn legit actress this season. Arthur Tracy and Martha Marston have delayed their marriage which was to have taken place this week, and, incidentally, Tracy has settled his suit with his manager, Ed Wolfe, winning a complete release by the payment of $27,000. Plenty far more important things have probably happened during the week—but, for the present, that's all I know.

FINANCE IS HESITANT; TRADE SHOWS GAINS

By B. C. FORBES

BUSINESS [illegible] modest gains in [illegible] but the financial world didn't relish the week's political developments. [illegible] sharp setback in stock prices [illegible] products.

Better Demand Seen for Motors

Power Consumption on the Rise

Gold Stock Is Mounting

New York State savings banks report $67,621,[illegible] increase in deposits for the last twelve months.

Our gold stock has mounted nearly a quarter-of-a-billion in the last three months.

The fact remains, however, that, at least in the financial world, a spirit of hesitancy has reappeared.

In a special article Sept. 11 we pointed out that the menace to U. S. Steel's preferred dividend appeared to be increasing. This phase of the financial situation has since been the subject of considerable comment by other financial writers. There is plenty of time to discuss the matter as the meeting at which action will be taken on the dividend is set for Oct. 25. Some think the nearness of the date to election may be a factor.

Textile Machinery Value $57,310,871

Washington, Sept. 19—Factory value of the production of textile machinery and parts in 1931 was $57,310,871, according to reports received by the bureau of the census from 322 establishments.

This represented a decrease of 49.2 per cent as compared with $112,851,238 reported by 376 establishments for 1929.

STATE ST. Hears:

That traders came down this morning in a questioning mood. Uneasiness prevailed in many quarters that had expressed optimism on Saturday. The net result is that all hands are going to let the stock list alone until a test of the lows has developed. For the writer's part, it might be just as well to hold aloof until a volume day is seen at levels somewhat under the lows of last week.

The Sour Notes

The uneasiness of traders is [illegible] traceable to happenings in the Saturday session. The behavior of Steel preferred was very poor. The issue was allowed to drift off in a manner that hinted at withdrawal of support. If such proves [illegible] the rest of the list [illegible] night.

[illegible] the [illegible] high must be looked on as something more than a technical correction after a speedy rise. The Southern weather outlook is favorable and [illegible] continue to hedge as soon as cotton is received from [illegible].

Summed up [illegible] hardly reason [illegible] become an active short seller [illegible] to take a [illegible] stand on market matters. These hurdles are not insurmountable and it is probable that [illegible] build up a short [illegible] going about it in [illegible] way.

This and That

The spot to watch for the real answer to the market's ability to stay on the upward path are approximately 50 per cent off recent tops. Measured by the averages they are at 65 on the Standard Statistics index and at about 61 on the Dow-Jones 30 industrials.

The [illegible] mentioned here [illegible] has not been [illegible] attractive [illegible] acting well. The explanation may be that the Federal commissioners are using the future of a large western holding company as an example [illegible] holding companies in general.

Despite this situation [illegible] utility field, a strong pool is said to be working in United Corporation. It is not unlikely that this group has as its aim the liquidation of a large block of stock. If followed at all [illegible] traders, it should be regarded as a hit or [illegible] proposition.

Riverside & Dan Mills More Active

Danville, Va., Sept. 19—Riverside & Dan River Cotton Mills have begun an extended working schedule. Notices have been posted notifying the workers that certain departments will work until 9 o'clock at night. The night [illegible] necessitated in order [illegible] urgent delivery.

The plants until several weeks ago had operated for several weeks on a four-day [illegible]. However, with increased production necessary, the plants went back on the full-week basis in short order and since have been gradually increasing operations until now the necessity to work at night.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Sept. 19—Grains were finished generally lower. Wheat closed [illegible] cent under Saturday's finish, corn [illegible] changed to ½ lower, oats [illegible] to ¼ up, and pr[illegible] to 7 cents down.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

POWERFUL influence of commodity price fluctuations, to which attention has been frequently called in these columns, was evident throughout the stock market session today. The bulk of active shares reflected closely the various gyrations in the wheat market. Early strength in wheat was attributed to anxiety over Argentine crop prospects. Later it was brought forward that the market was faced with a 1,461,000-bushel increase of the United States wheat visible supply and by persistent big Canadian receipts.

Motor Outlook Is Believed Brighter

Many believe the outlook for the automotive industry next year is brighter. Motor shares held firm most of today's session. Brokers interested in the motor shares are talking of automobile production in 1933 of well over 3,000,000 cars. There are several active pools in the motor shares, according to Street gossip.

View on the Oils Undergoes a Change

Firms that have been talking of a rise in oil shares in the last few weeks, which advance has not materialized, now say that the statistical position of the oil industry is not as satisfactory. Plans for larger entries of Soviet oil at various centers feature the new picture.

687 Listed Stocks Below a Week Ago

Roosevelt Speech on Rails Is Good

[illegible] Roosevelt's Salt Lake City [illegible] offering constructive suggestions in connection with the rail situation, was regarded as [illegible] investment banking circles, in line with expectations as [illegible] in these columns Saturday.

Convinced Rails Are Coming Back

Vice-Pres. Deasy of Pennsylvania [illegible] is convinced American rails are emerging from depression. He said necessity for economy has enabled roads to eliminate necessary practices which could [illegible] have been so quickly recognized and removed during prosperous times.

Traffic Trend Is Viewed as Better

Study today shows that the decrease of 57,903 or 10.3 per cent in car loadings of revenue freight for the week ended September 10, from the total of the previous week, was neither bad nor unexpected in view of the Labor Day holiday. In the corresponding week last year the decline from the preceding week was 12.1 per cent.

More significant [illegible] a somewhat improving traffic trend is the fact that in comparison with last year the week ended September 10 showed a decrease of but 24.8 per cent, virtually the smallest loss since March. It is to be considered, of course, that a year ago the traffic trend was downward.

Exchange Cuts Down Data About Bears

The Exchange's new ruling on information on the short interest in the market will lighten the burden on the clerical forces of Stock Exchange houses, but has no effect whatever on conditions surrounding actual short selling. The new ruling stipulates that hereafter short positions are to be reported weekly instead of daily and reports on "in and out" short transactions are to be discontinued.

Restrictions around short selling were put into effect late last winter at the height of the governmental agitation over them. Since the markets have stabilized, there has been considerable talk of lifting all restrictions governing the making of short sales.

Pickup Is Waiting on Heavy Industries

There are few evidences as yet of any marked upturn in the heavy industries and until there is a real change for the better here, it is scarcely to be expected that railroad traffic will stage a real comeback. Consumer goods lines have, however, experienced substantial improvement since July and railroad traffic naturally feels the effect of this. Loadings of grain and grain products have also shown encouraging gains.

Pennsy. Selling of Lehigh Valley R. R.

Indication that Pennsylvania Railroad may have sold some of its Lehigh Valley stock is contained in statement of investments as of July 31, showing investments in other than affiliated companies of $77,-964,589 against $109,082,791 year before, decrease of $31,000,000. Total investment of road in Lehigh Valley and Wabash was $106,000,000. Logical purchaser of Lehigh holdings would be Van Sweringens.

Willys-Overland Harvester Parley

Pres. Miller of Willys-Overland Co. says negotiations are under way with International Harvester Co. for working arrangement covering sales and manufacturing. Arrangement is being made only to effect plant economies, and the two companies will retain their names and stock responsibility.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MIXED

Stocks were mixed in late dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today after an irregularly lower opening. Rail shares led a mild upturn in share prices and forenoon losses were either reduced or converted into moderate gains.

Atchison was over a point higher. Boston & Providence advanced 5 points while Providence & Worcester receded a similar amount. New Haven showed a fractional gain while Pennsylvania eased fractionally. Maine Central preferred was a point below its last closing price.

F[illegible] National Stores was strong and showed a gain of over a point. Railway Light & Security was 3 points above its last closing price. New England Telephone hovered around its previous closing price for the greater part of the session.

Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred turned soft and showed a loss of 4 points. United Shoe added a major fraction. Gillette sold unchanged after recording an early fractional gain.

Soviet Oil Shipment Arrives in Canada

Danish tanker has started unloading at Montreal 9000 tons of oil from Russia, first of series of shipments traded by Soviet for about $1,000,000 in Canadian aluminum. Crude oil is not among list of Russian products barred from Canada.

SPECTATOR Says:

The market is still going through a testing period as the new week opens.

The industrials were giving more ground in the previous session under fresh pressure on the U. S. Steel issues, while the rails continued to give a good account of themselves. Bonds were better while commodities again made a poor showing.

Forming Base

There is a strong belief among those still inclined to favor the market that a base is being formed for another advance. This may not take place right away, though, and the market may go lower in the meantime.

Technically, stocks are finding support around the lows of the current decline. This is favorable. The rails still hold the immediate fate of the market.

Commodities Important

As important, however, are commodities. In fact they mean much more, for they represent fundamental purchasing power. Cotton has been disheartening but good scale buying has been going on. Wheat has been showing more stabilization and the grain picture is slowly changing for the better. Informed quarters say that big Eastern banking interests like wheat at current levels and will support it on a scale down on any further decline. The support point is still around 52 cents a bushel for December.

This is interesting since large scale accumulation is reported in Case Threshing . . . Case, of course, is in one of those thin situations and could easily go down considerably from here if the market slips.

German Reichsbank Loan Is Renewed

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 19 (INS)—The Bank for International Settlements, at its 24th directors' meeting, today confirmed the renewal of its loan to the German Reichsbank until Dec. 3.

It was indicated Austria intends ultimate payment of the service on her 1930 loan, payments of which were stopped in July.

Dividends

Puget Sound Power & Light Co. declared a dividend of $1 on the $6 cumulative preferred. Previously it paid $1.50 quarterly. Dividend is payable October 15 to stock of record September 20.

* * *

The Travelers Insurance Company declared a $4 quarterly dividend payment Oct. 1 to stockholders of record today. This makes the third quarterly dividend of the same amount for the year.

* * *

State Street Trust Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $3 a share, payable Oct. 1 to stock of record Sept. 23.

COMING WEEKS IMPORTANT IN STEEL TRADE

Following the better buying which appeared in steel following Labor Day, further slight improvement in demand is reported from some districts. Leaders in the industry, however, refuse to overenthuse, being inclined to wait for further proof of a definite reversal. They contend that any continued improvement of necessity will be slow.

There was a comparatively good increase in production of ingots following the Labor Day shutdowns. This was anticipated in the trade because a few consumers of steel had specified for deliveries on contracts to be started after the summer season and the mills expanded activities to turn out the steel required.

The next few weeks will indicate whether the gain in output will be as good as many have predicted. The larger companies will be satisfied if a rate of 25 per cent or slightly more is reached before the winter season starts.

Users of steel are unlikely to rush into the market with heavy tonnages, knowing that steel companies are in a position to fill orders rapidly as desired.

While the price situation is reported to be somewhat better there still is talk of concessions having been granted in a few articles when makers have sought business to keep up their operating schedules. This condition is not abnormal after a period of depression. For that reason it is not attracting much interest among leaders.

A small gain has been made in tin plate activity due to moderately larger specifications from can companies. New orders indicate that the $4.75 base price per box has been shaded in some instances for new orders, but there is less talk of a reduction in the official price for fourth quarter deliveries.

Retail Business Up So Far This Month

The first 15 days in September showed an improvement in retail business, according to statements made by merchants in 34 leading cities in the United States, the Daily News Record reports in its issue today.

In the majority of cities the September decline compared with the same period in 1931 was very much less severe than the decline experienced in the first eight months compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year.

Very substantial improvement is indicated in ready-to-wear departments, and the home furnishing departments showed a better position. Quality merchandise is in greater demand and consumers are making more of their purchases.

Atchison Loading Total Makes Gain

Chicago, Sept. 19—Atchison in the week ended Sept. 17 handled 25,597 revenue freight cars, against 22,052 the previous week and 30,961 a year before.

STOCKS LOWER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Sept. 19—Important shares sold off at the opening today, recovered to wipe out their losses of a point or two, then reacted again in the last hour, the leaders mostly finishing down a point or two.

U. S. Steel issues were weak throughout the day, on doubts expressed regarding maintenance of the preferred dividend. The common sold off more than 2 points and the preferred was down 7 points, rallying at times.

WEAKNESS IN WHEAT

The decline in the last hour mirrored weakness in the wheat market. Issues finished off a point or two included Atchison, Coca Cola, B. & O., Case, Bethlehem, Lackawanna, du Pont, Eastman, Union Pacific and American Can.

The list turned upward as trading entered the afternoon hours, with most rails and many industrials moderately higher.

Most market operators appeared to be weighing evidence on recent business gains and to attach major importance to the question of whether the upturn was actually exceeding seasonal scope, or was barely up to seasonal measure.

Electric power production figures have been considered as furnishing strong support for a reasonable amount of optimism. Ordinarily, production during the Labor Day week falls about 4 per cent below the preceding week. This year, however, the decline was held to about 2 per cent.

This, coupled with the trend of freight movements, was taken as a hopeful indication that business was plodding gradually ahead.

The first 15 days of September showed an improvement in retail business, according to statements made to Fairchild publications by merchants in 25 leading cities in the United States. In a majority of the cities the September decline compared with the same period of 1931 was very much less severe than the decline experienced in the first eight months compared to the same period of the preceding year.

At annual meeting of stockholders of Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corp. Chairman Dahl stated that as far as he knew there were no unification negotiations under way at present.

LEADERS TO MEET

The eyes of some banking and brokerage leaders were turned to the meeting next Friday of Eastern trunk line heads when, there now appears to be basis for believing, a final agreement may be reached on their answer to the Interstate Commerce Commission's consolidation proposal.

Everything considered, there is no question but that the lighter trades, with textiles still in the van, have been enjoying more than modest revival geenrally speaking. these consuming industries presumably will continue to enjoy activity.

Heavy industries, however, have yet to receive any impetus beyond seasonal influences.

In the long-term range, elections play a relatively modest role in economics. To the stock market at themoment, however, the great incentive for the previous rise had been political in character.

It remains to be seen whether the same banking powers are willing to resume their market sponsorship in the hope of re-electing their favorite. At least the market's technical condition has been relatively improved.

Market Value of 50 Stocks Lower

New York, Sept. 19—Market value of 50 representative stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange at the close of business for the week ended Sept. 17 was $9,433,807,524, a decrease of $1,535,574,751, or 13.53 per cent, as compared with the market value of $10,969,382,275 at the close of the preceding week, according to a compilation today by Paul H. Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same 50 stocks had a market value of $14,135,210,163, indicating a decrease during the year of $4,701,402,639, or 33.26 per cent.

Insull Auctions Again Postponed

New York, Sept. 19—Setting a new high record with more than a dozen postponements the action of collateral of Insull Utilities Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago held by New York banks has been postponed until September 26.

PRODUCTION OF SHOES IS UP

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Some slight increases in the wholesale prices of certain grades of shoes again has raised the question in the hide and leather market of just how soon the important factor of "deferred demand" will begin to make its appearance.

Trade reviews report that boot and shoe manufacturing in the East broadened moderately during the past week, but that there was some slight let-down in other sectinons of the country. Production continued to center almost exclusively on lower cost shoes.

Hides, considered one of the most sensitive of commodities, are just about holding their own in the price structure. Quotations eased a trifle last week, but packer grades are still around 100 per cent up from the lows of last June.

Statistics of the New York hide exchange disclose that production of all cattle hides for the first seven months of this year totaled 8,238,000 equivalent hides, or a decline of 13.1 per cent in comparison with the 9,474,000 hides entering leather production during the same period of 1931.

Westinghouse Plans Co-operative Sales

A new sales plan which capitalizes on the sales campaign conducted by its employes during May and June was announced by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co.

The plan enlists the permanent co-operation of every Westinghouse employe in promoting sales of the household electrical products manufactured by the company. The employe finds and interests the prospective buyer. The actual sale is made by a regular dealer.

Month's Car Sales Are Found Steady

Detroit, Sept. 19—Truck and commercial car sales in August equalled or slightly exceeded July, estimates R. L. Polk & Co.

Registrations in 27 states showed sales of 7412 new trucks and commercial cars or 0.53 per cent over 7373 registered in July, but 41.89 per cent less than 12,754 in August, 1931.

Business Is Moving Up, Says Rukeyser

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Sept. 19—Business, responding to seasonal and other stimuli, has been creeping with an irregular upward tendency, after having fallen early in the summer to an almost unbelievably low level.

It started out in July with industrial production at just a shade over 50 per cent of computed normal. The rate of output in many basic lines had been adjusted to the snail-like pace then prevailing in industry. Factories were adjusted to anything except any improvement in sentiment.

Since that time there has been marked gain in the financial situation, as a result of the passing of the panic psychology. The repulsing of the foreign raid on the American dollar was the turning point, and the prodigality of relief to hungry banks and needy railroads temporarily at least eased the tension.

In the light of the artificial stimulus administered the actual net gains in business have, it is true, been indecisive. Yet, from a long-term standpoint, it may be significant that the decline has been arrested.

The counter seasonal rise in ingot production was an encouraging straw in the wind. Likewise gains in electric power consumption, coal output and freight car loadings have continued. The August increase of more than seasonal proportions in the factory payrolls in New York State was another good sign.

The improvement in security and commodity prices, it will be recalled, followed the unprecedentedly vigorous reflationary credit policy of the Federal Reserve Banks.

Closing in London Easy

London, Sept. 19 (A)—Trading today on the Stock Exchange opened quietly with good support in investment issues, gold mining shares and oils. Other sections were dull, declining later on disappointing Wall Street and Paris news, and closed easy.

Hope for Rate Cut Cheers

Berlin, Sept 19 (AP)—Prospects that the Bank for International Settlements would consent to a reduction in the Reichsbank discount rate were judged such a bullish factor on the Boerse today that the unfavorable impression of the British note on arms equality was placed in the background. The closing was quietly sustained.

U. S. Coffee Supply Less

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Supply of coffee in the United States and afloat today amounted to 721,992 bags against 1,917,594 on the same date last year, the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange announced. Stocks of Brazilian coffee in this country totaled 195,810 bags. Brazilian "afloats" were estimated at 227,200 bags. The total supply does not include about 1,000,000 bags being held by the Grain Stabilization Corporation, which can be marketed only at a rate of 62,500 bags monthly.

INCREASES OF STOCK PLANNED

New England Power Co. has filed with the commisssioner of corporations and taxation notice of increase in capital stock by $1,200,000, all paid-in on September 2.

Stockholders of Jenney Manufacturing Co. have voted to increase authorized common stock from $75,000 to $125,000.

Stockholders of Boston Port Development Co. have voted to issue new stock on the basis of one new $100 par share for each 100 old no-par shares. After the exchange there will be outstanding 15,000 $100-par shares.

More Brokers Branch Offices Maintained

New York, Sept. 19—Expansion of trading on New York Stock Exchange in August caused first increase in number of branch offices maintained by brokers in more than year, monthly bulltins of Exchange points out. On September 1 there were 1160 branches of Stock Exchange firms, increase of 18 over August 1. Increase is contrary to usual seasonal trend, since brokers begin to close offices at summer resorts at end of August. On January 1, 1930, number of branch offices was 1658, high record.

Gatineau Profits for Quarter Gain

Ottawa, Sept. 19—Gatineau Power Company and subsidiary companies report increases in both gross and net earnings in the second quarter of this year over the corresponding quarter of last year. Gross revenue including other income was $2,265,323 compared with $2,202,711 in the second quarter a year ago; net revenue available for interest and depreciation was $2,148,731 against $1,911,027; and balance added to surplus was $671,121 compared with $372,327.

Profit for Sears Viewed as Likely

Chicago, Sept. 19—While Sears, Roebuck & Co. should in any event run in the black the second half of its fiscal year, which this year will contain one extra period, ability to more than make up the net loss of $2,893,000 the first seven four-week periods will depend largely on trend of commodity prices, particularly agricultural products.

WHITE'S AT 74 IS GIVING BIG N. E. PARTY

The clarion call of "It's our birthday, but you get the presents," marking the beginning of the R. H. White Co. 74th Anniversary Sale, echoes through New England today giving encouraging news to the 8,166,341 inhabitants, not alone in the merchandise values of the event but in the fact that thousands of New England men and women have for months been working in factories and salesrooms preparing merchandise stocks for one of Boston's leading stores.

Even years previous to 1858, while still in his 'teens, Ralph Huntington White built the future of the business which still bears his name by selling dry goods, smallwares and furs from a two-wheeled wagon with which he traveled throughout the Berkshire Hills.

MISS NELLIE WALSH

In the Civil War days of '62 Mr. White became a partner in the firm of Banker & Towner, Hanover st. silk merchants. When the firm was sold he established his own store on Winter st. and after a period of steady growth he found it necessary to locate in larger quarters, the present site of the R. H. White Co.

HAD FIRST ESCALATOR

The R. H. White Co. was the first store in the United States to install an escalator even though the largest elevator in a store in the United States was in operation, holding 50 passengers. Two modern, fast speed elevators now occupy this place. The first electric light used in any store in Boston was installed in the R. H. White Co. and the store was the first store lighted by electricity in Boston. The bulb still lights, a bamboo filament being used, and is on exhibition at the Edison Museum, built by Henry Ford at Dearborn, Mich. Again Mr. White set the pace in retail store operation by installing the first pneumatic tube system in any Boston store.

Within the year nearly $150,000 has been expended by the store in general improvements. One major move was the installation of the new luncheonette on the street floor at a cost of $35,000.

Through the years it has been a long step in delivery service from 100 horses that used to handle the R. H. White Co. delivery service about greater Boston to the brand new fleet of seven van type auto trucks that have been added to the R. H. White Co. automotive delivery in the past few days.

MANY VETERAN EMPLOYES

Among the store personnel 178 members of the R. H. White Co. Long Service Club have "carried on" in step with the march of progress. The 178 men and women have been in the employ of the store for 15 years and longer. In this group are 65 men and women who have worked for R. H. White Co. for 25 to 49 years; 2 between the 20 and 25-year limits, and 61 between the 1 5and 20 years of service. The oldest in length of service is Miss Nellie Welsh, who joined the organization in 1883 as a little cash girl. Today Miss Welsh directs the destinies of the R. H. White Co. Store Members' Credit Union, a banking institution operating under state laws for the benefit of the employes.

The following range from 49 to 25 years of continuous employment; Swen Benson, James Burke, Josephine Cadigan, Harry E. Carter, Louise Cellarius, Alice Corbett, Carrie Craig, Dehou Devillers, Isabella Douglas, Catherine Fallon, Nellie J. Finneran, Frances Flynn, William Fraser, Thomas B. NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 75,000

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1932

Hearst Papers Advocate

1—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

2—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

3—Immediate modification of the Volstead act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

Vicious Labor Conditions on Our State Roads

You have been reading in the news columns of the Boston Evening American an exact portrayal of the astonishing and indefensible conditions imposed upon our citizens who have applied for the right to work on State highways, by "bad" contractors.

Our good citizens who, in normal times, pay taxes to maintain the State and to build these roads, have found to their surprise that the jobs are occupied to a large degree by aliens who neither live in Massachusetts nor help to pay its bills.

When the occasional citizen of Massachusetts does get a job, he is often placed under the direction of brutal overseers who overload him with laborious tasks calculated to "break him" in forty-eight hours and cause him to retire, exhausted in body and dispirited in mind.

When the occasional citizen of Massachusetts does get a job, he too often finds that the wage is pitiably small and thoroughly inadequate to maintain himself and his family.

These "bad" contractors are defying the laws of Massachusetts and they are defying the common rights of the men out of work in Massachusetts.

They are practicing conditions of peonage and brutality which the decent contractors of Massachusetts would not impose and which consequently deprive them of the highway contracts, the business and the reasonable profit which should be derived by Massachusetts people.

The Commissioner of Labor, Mr. Edwin Smith, whose efforts to defeat the condition are above question, declares that the labor laws are vague and ineffective and that criminal conviction of the errant contractors who defy the laws is either doubtful or impossible.

Very well. If the law won't do, let's write into the contracts that the contractor who violates the right of citizens' preference or soldiers' preference or who fails to pay the average, normal wage shall relinquish the contract and shall forfeit the claim of compensation for the work he had already performed. Hit THEIR pocketbooks and you will bring them to their senses.

Governor Winant has tried that experiment in New Hampshire, Governor-elect Brann says he will put it into practice when he takes office. Governor Ely, the Governor's Council and the Department of Public Works of Massachusetts should adopt it now, while they are in office.

The people of Massachusetts appropriated many millions of dollars for highway construction in order that Massachusetts citizens should be afforded useful occupation and an income to keep them against poverty and hardship.

Anybody who flaunts this law is flaunting the good and kindly intentions of the people of Massachusetts. He is capitalizing human misery.

A Newspaper's Duty in Exposing Criminals

State Detective Michael Fleming, a veteran of criminal investigation, described the Boston Evening American's reportorial achievements in the extraordinary DuBois murder case as "an amazing course of newspaper publicity with a tremendous psychological effect."

In this expert opinion he was joined by Dist. Atty. John V. Sullivan of Norfolk County. Putting it plainly, these officers meant that the reporters of this newspaper, by their diligence, ingenuity, patience and determination, explored every feature of this unusual crime and uncovered the convicting evidence which baffled or eluded every agency concerned in its solution, including the powerful Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The "tremendous psychological effect" was, of course, the suicide of DuBois, an admission in itself of guilt. The wife murderer could scorn and defy the public authorities but he could not resist the irrevocable net of evidence being woven by the daily news reports of this newspaper, and he disposed of himself rather than face inevitable arrest and death in the electric chair for his brutal crime.

The Boston Evening American, out of this grim and unusual tragedy, derives only the satisfaction that it has been of some service to its readers and to the public as a whole.

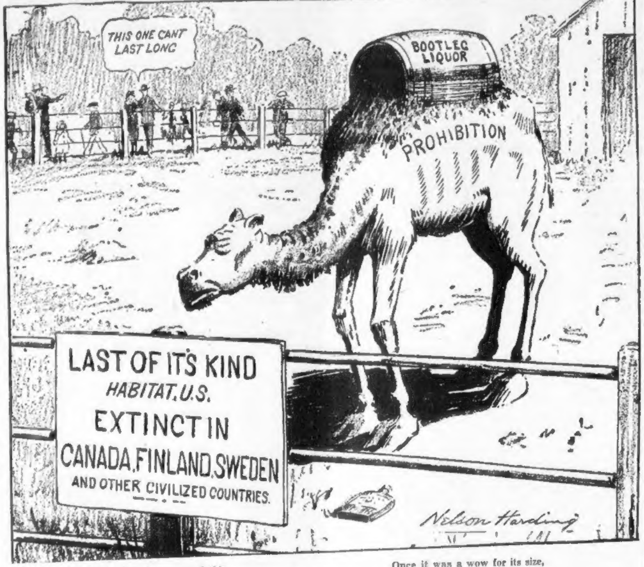
The premeditated, thoughtful, cunning murder of a faithful wife, followed by the nights of gay revelry in the very house in which her body was concealed, demanded detection and solution. Every women understands this. Every good man realizes this.

Crime flourishes only when it escapes punishment. The criminal and the philanderer fear publicity and the consequent danger of conviction. Impressionable young women will find in the DuBois case the moral which should keep them to the path of virtue.

The public, whom they serve, will not be slow to appreciate the commendable activities of Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan, Chief of Police Russell Dearborn of Plymouth and of the state detectives, including Mr. Fleming, who contested with skill and diligence against one of the most cunningly-devised and inexplicable crimes ever committed in the State of Massachusetts. The Evening American knows at first hand the splendid work done by these men and believes it will not be overlooked by the state at large.

The Species Is Nearly Extinct

By Nelson Harding



This animal looks poor and thin.
The creature, in fact, is all in.
The expression is sad,
And the health just too bad,
For the poor thing has lost all its kin.

Once it was a wow for its size,
But never agreeable or wise.
It quit using its bean,
And its temper got mean.
So no one regrets its demise.

O. O. McIntyre
Crossing the Atlantic

Thrill of Sailing

AT SEA, Sept. 19—Ascending a gang plank, I always think of Scamp Montgomery's ecstatic yelp at his first voyage: "Swell creek, some skiff!" Few thrills surpass that of a liner easing out to midstream, scorning the snub-nosed tugs and heading majestically for the ever mysterious deep.

A mass flutter of 'kerchiefs, acres of upturned faces, the startled flights of gulls, the dimming roar from a thousand throats—Manhattan and its cluster of needle spires go shimmering by. One feels, all of a sudden, a somebody—an integral part of a high adventure, a back log in a big blaze.

This ship is the Ile de France, long a favorite because of its fine consideration for dogs. Billy, the Boston, is starting his 16th crossing. The Sealyham was left behind because he reacts peevishly to change. Even spending a night at Greenwich, Ct., he howled continuously—just a homebody.

Billy's staunch friend, Charlot, a 15-year-old page boy in a cocky tambourine cap and a pouter pigeon-chested uniform of pink, espied him trotting up the gangway. He rushed to the dog, which nuzzled a wet nose against his cheek and Charlot crooned a volatile sing-song of endearing French.

The dog, embarrassingly diffident to strangers, wiggled joyously and trotted off with him for some mysterious ship quarter. I suspect the kitchen. This voyage was an overnight impulse. A New England motor trip was in prospect. Then in a fever of packing we caught this ship by an eyelash.

* * *

Experience has taught me planned vacations are often duds. Those mapped out generally result in our rocking away on some seaside hotel porch, barely speaking and in something of a black stupor. But by jumping suddenly into some crazy jaunt we find, at least, we have not been bored.

* * *

For instance, in an alcoved recess a short way from my Deck A cabin, I noticed the identity card bearing the name of an infamously-discussed international gigolo. He is a fellow of waxed hair, onyx eyes, long side-burns and a general patent-leather patina. His door is on hook and thus for a week I can observe the home life of a gentleman gleaner. Too, I have longed to know how he acquires such jauntily flaring effects with white evening tie ends.

* * *

The ninny in me, I suppose, but I like to stand aft as a liner cuts its path of luminous turrets to the sea. There is a stark grip watching that impossibly fantastic and sharply edged array of towers that is Manhattan, slowly tu. to a lilac vagueness. One second a thin opaque in mist, a dip of the ship and it is gone. One is honestly-to-goodness at sea. Everyone doubtless doubtless experiences that quick desolating clutch: Shall I ever see it again?

* * *

The good flag-ship begins to roll in answer to the swelling sea. I had a mess of grand ideas about dinner tonight—potage ognione, pate de fois gras, truffles, peches flambe. But with that last roll it just struck me dieting is dandy. Food is fol de rol anyway. At heart I'm ascetic, yearning to be pale and interesting. And it's beginning to look as though I'll get my yearn.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Are We Always Selfish?

FOUR YOUNG MEN started a debate.

Ended in a riot.

Want a job?

"DO WE ONLY DO THE THINGS WE WANT TO DO?"

For example—

Elsie Robinson

A young man sacrifices his own youth, gives up a college career renounces the girl he loves and devotes himself to the support of his fatherless brothers and sisters. What's the answer?

Is he a saint, or is he doing the things he wants to do?

Did he bravely conquer a temptation to be selfish, or did he secretly PREFER that grim sacrifice to joyous self-development?

Then does he, or doesn't he, deserve any credit for his generous deeds?

Another example—

A town is suddenly gripped by a deadly epidemic. A doctor leaves his home and loved ones, isolates himself in the danger zone, labors there, day and night, until he, too, is stricken down.

Is he a hero, or is he simply following out the law of his own nature?

In other words, is he actually being SELFISH?

Are we always selfish—as selfish in our GOOD DEEDS as in our BAD DEEDS?

DO WE ALWAYS DO THE THINGS WE WANT TO DO?

"That's absurd," you say. "Often I do things I don't want to do. Often I am tempted and yet resist the temptation."

But do you really resist the temptation, or do you do the thing you secretly desire to do?

And, being what you are, could you have done anything else?

That leads on to another even more exasperating problem—

IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A "FREE WILL"?

Have we the power to choose between good and evil, or must we do what we're shaped to do?

A disturbing question, isn't it? It disturbed those four young men. Two of them said that we only did that which we wanted to do. Two of them denied that and said we had to struggle between good and evil and deserved a lot of credit when we chose the finer things.

Then the fight was on. Presently all four of these young men were very, very angry.

You'll be angry, too, if you start to discuss that question. Human beings have been getting angry over such questions since the world began. But that is how and why the human brain has grown.

Our brains grow by asking questions; by thinking about everything in life, even the simplest things; by taking nothing for granted; by doubting and questioning and rebelling and battling to find the truth.

Go on; try to answer that question! See how hard it is to answer! Get mad about it! Discover how little you really know about yourself or anyone else. You'll be surprised! And you'll be humiliated.

BUT SURPRISE AND HUMILIATION ARE THE BEGINNING OF WISDOM.

Just Folks

White Mice

Though Janet thinks them very nice
Her mother has dread of mice,
Of brown, or white as snow.
She does not like to hear them squeal,
Or watch them racing in a wheel
Which nowhere seems to go.
But here they are with beady eyes
And tails just twice their bodies' size.

Two pair of mice with silver coats
On which the lovely Janet dotes
And calls exceeding cute.
Two pair of mice, which, if you please,
Must every day have bread and cheese
And oats and fancy fruit.
Two pair of mice—precisely four—
With possibilities of more.

Oh, kindly friend, we fear our child
With artfulness has you beguiled,
Else why should white mice come?
Your gift? She put it in your mind!
And well you knew that she'd be kind
To little creatures dumb.
But did it not occur to you
That we must live with Janet, too?

Rabbits and birds and dogs and mice
Against our judgment and advice
She wheedles from her friends.
And, oh, the rapture and the glee
When first she dances in to see
The creatures someone sends.
But when the novelty takes wings,
Mother and I must feed the things.

Daily Bible Text—"Look to yourselves that we lose not those things which we have wrought."—I St. John i, 8.

By the Rev. Charles A. Forbes, Presbyterian Church, Mattapan. Next text by the Rev. A. W. Caley, Central M. E. Church, North Easton.

One Thing Is NEVER Dull
And That Is FAIR WOMAN

We wish to remark, making our language plain, that woman, in her hours of ease or otherwise, is never dull, never a bore, never THE SAME. Little pictures on the right prove it.

Look at those two English girls in the top picture, what fine muscles on the shoulder-blades. What a sorrow that you will, in all this life, NEVER see their faces.

Look at that little Chicago girl, No. 2 in the row, Miss Janet Plume, climbing into her plane to attend an Air Club dinner. Does SHE look worried by the depression?

Times have changed, for the young girl, concerning what we call "perfect modesty." This one goes forth to meet the world with her back entirely bare to the waist, and her front with only a little handkerchief tied around the neck to protect it. And she is modest, in 1932.

And there is even greater change in this world's methods, when a young girl goes out to dine not only in this costume, but by AIRPLANE, and runs the plane herself.

Consider No. 3 from the top, the two young English girls, starting out for a swim at Balham. No worry, grief or sorrow is written on those faces. And no British policeman orders them to put on a wrap. In Europe they go the whole way or none of the distance.

And consider those ladies "making hay," or perhaps that is a bundle of oats that they are holding up. Anyhow, they remind you of Shakespeare's lines: "The lark that tirralirra chants, with hey, with hey, the thrush and the jay, are summer songs for me and my aunts, as we lie tumbling in the hay."

These young female British "haymakers" will interest American girls. Perhaps they will suggest the wisdom of getting out of the cities and on to the farms in our country. That suggestion is needed.

And farm life means opportunity to see the sky, the sun and the moon and the stars, something besides the deep canyons of a city street.

There is no beauty like "rustic" beauty. The poet could not have written "Maud Muller" about some narrow-hipped, carefully painted, high-heeled city girl.

The picture at the bottom of the row shows a young English woman bent on "pleasure," starting from Waterloo Station in London. She is saying, and this quotation is not imaginary: "I work hard; why should I not play?" So now she will play and enjoy herself, taking along odds and ends that will be useful. Let us hope that before she gets far away from Waterloo Station, she will meet some broad-shouldered, deep-chested, blue-eyed, attractive masculine British, Scotch, Welsh or Irish person who will say: "Let me carry those for you," and turn out to be "a perfect gentleman."

Everything in this world is comparative. Many will say: "There could be no PLEASURE, with such a load to carry." But a girl who has worked hard, as this girl has, and who finds herself free from her counter, sewing machine or other form of industrial employment, has real pleasure even with this heavy load, since the pleasure comes with FREEDOM, at almost any price.
